STUDY THE FACES OF THESE MEN

Do they look like men who would betray the State?

Both of them were born in Massachusetts and have lived here all their lives.

They are honest. Their personal integrity is above suspicion. No one who knows them has ever accused either of graft.

They glory in the traditions of Massachusetts. They are far more interested in the real welfare of the State and its inhabitants than are the persons who appear to believe that only an agent of the trusts is competent to hold an official position.

HEARST, IN FINAL WORD, APPEALS TO PATRIOTS

WARNS FOLLOWERS OF PURPOSE OF PLUNDERBUND TO CORRUPT BALLOT.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The following letter was sent to-day to all the Independence League watchers throughout the State:

"My Dear Sir:

"I desire to say a final word to you as a fellow-citizen and as a fellow-soldier in the cause of clean politics and honest government. In the first place, I want to thank you personally for what you have already done in the campaign to save the principles of Jefferson, as Lincoln said, 'from total overthrow in this country.'

"All the forces were opposed to these principles. Backed by the power of monopoly they united solidly against us and for Hughes. Yet their only hope of winning this election lies in the corrupt use of money. The grand masters of the plunderbund never donate to a political party; THEY INVEST.

"In collecting their corruption fund the investors have taken from their stores of ill-gotten gains without causing themselves the slightest inconvenience. They control the necessaries of life, and the public service corporations, and can, by advancing prices, restore in one week to their coffers every dollar invested in the Hughes campaign. In other words, the power of monopoly enables them to compel you to furnish THEIR corruption fund with which they have subsidized the purchasable press and arrayed against us every venal politician in the State.

"You are doubtless aware that practically the entire financial burden of our campaign has fallen on the shoulders of one man who controls no monopoly, whenever engaged in a stock juggling deal, or possessed or desired a special privilege from the government.

"The money spent in our campaign has been used for organization purposes, but I find the burden so great that the amount available, for watchers to prevent our votes from being stolen on election day is comparatively small. We must therefore depend upon the patriotism and loyalty of the workers to win the fight.

"The opposition poll workers will be supplied with large sums of money on election day, but this money was FIRST EXTORTED from the people by criminal corporations before THEY gave it to Mr. Hughes. THEY will recall it to their coffers with added interest in the event of his election, since they will have power to reimburse themselves from your incomes.

"This is the people's fight for justice, liberty and equal opportunity. We have labored together in this campaign as patriotic citizens earnestly interested in the perpetuation of the American system of government.

"Victory is in sight.

"Let us battle bravely to the end and make that victory sure.

"Sincerely yours,

"WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST."

MORAN DEMANDS THAT JEROME YIELD TOBACCO TRUST BRIBE PROOF

District Attorney Moran has made a formal demand upon District Attorney Jerome of New York, in the name of the people of Massachusetts, to take steps to secure certain letters which disclosed facts showing the manner in which Thomas F. Ryan's Tobacco Trust debauches State legislatures and courts, employs its lobbyists in every State where its interests are menaced, and uses the direct acts of the corruptionist and briber to swell its profits.

Mr. Moran believes these letters form evidence of work between Tobacco Trust agents and members of the last Massachusetts Legislature, to defeat proposed legislation that would be harmful to the trust's interests, if enacted.

These letters are now in the possession of the editors of Collier's Weekly in New York. Mr. Moran's demand for them, and the account of how they became known to him are printed herewith.

Thomas F. Ryan is the founder and head of the Tobacco Trust, having conceived the idea of forming it and following personally the development, in the course of which it forced every small tobacco company to capitulate.

Elihu Root has been Mr. Ryan's attorney and general adviser in all his corporate and political enterprises.

Some years ago the Republican organization in New York engaged the services of a politician, one "Frederick S. Gibbs, widely known as "Wicked Gibbs."

In 1885, and for years after, he was a member of the New York State Senate. In 1895 he was a member for Monroe. In 1900 he was a member of the Republican National Committee. He died in 1903 full of political honors, earned at the same time that he was employed by the Tobacco Trust as its central manager of its National system of bribery.

Fremont Cole, whose name appears in certain of the correspondence, was Speaker of the New York Assembly in 1888-89, but was retired from politics at the time of the notorious "Papier mache ceiling" rumpus.

From his office at No. 1 Madison avenue, New York, Gibbs plotted his wires that killed anti-cigarette bills and anti-trust legislation in half a score of States. One of his tools was an Indiana State senator named A. G. Baker.

The letters from Gibbs to Baker are revelations of fraud and unblushing insolence upon bribery.

The agent at the Indiana capital was a member of the State Senate, but when one bill affecting the Tobacco Trust came out of committee it was throttled with dismissal, unless he secured its recommitment. Telegrams in cipher told of the dispatch of money "for expenses," and named legislator whom it would be well for the lobbyist to "see."

Baker did his work well. But after the bill was suppressed at Indianapolis the gratified Tobacco Trust sent him on similar business into other States—Colorado, Wisconsin, Minnesota. But an inquiring

HILTON JOINS GUILD IN ATTACKING HEARST

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, Nov. 5.—In a paid advertisement in the three Lowell daily papers to-day, under the heading, "Another Statement to the Voters of the Seventh District by Senator Hilton," that member of the Massachusetts Senate, who was knowingly called from the State House by means of a fake telegram when the Overtime Bill came up to be defeated, says:

In reply to an edition of the yellow journal of last Saturday, the first page of which was dedicated to me, I wish to say that I am proud of the censure of such a paper. The opinion of President Roosevelt, in regard to Mr. Hearst and his papers, is my own opinion.

I would feel badly indeed if my record in the Senate pleased the BOSTON AMERICAN. I did not go to the Senate to follow Mr. Hearst or his paid attorney, Mr. Auerbach. It must be patent to every Republican in the district by now that this whole concentrated attack upon me and other Republican candidates is nothing more nor less than an attempt of Mr. Hearst's lieutenants to acquire a balance of power in the State Senate, and if this fact is not known I would state that positive information to that effect has come to me from a reliable source in Boston.

(Signed) HORTON H. HILTON.

Hilton is one of the four Senators who purposely stayed away from the Senate so that the overtime bill might be defeated. He is the only one of the four who is a candidate for re-election. The others either were detained at the primaries or were taken care of elsewhere.

Although Mr. Hilton agrees with Governor Guild, it is a fact that Mr. Guild has not made any speeches in Lowell or in Hilton's district. The Republicans have neglected the district. Apparently they are afraid to be associated with Mr. Hilton.

Watch the American's Election Bulletins To-morrow Night.

On election night the BOSTON AMERICAN will establish a complete bulletin service with the earliest results from all over Massachusetts and New York at the two most central points. One set of bulletins will be displayed at the juncture of Summer and Devonshire streets. The other will be located in Adams square.

These returns will give the results first in the greatest political battles ever waged in the two States.

INQUIRY AS TO $15,000 EXPENDITURE

Charges of Irregularities Made by James M. Perkins Against Portland Fair Commissioner Being Investigated—Miss Rich a Witness.

To investigate the expenditure of every penny of the $15,000 appropriation made by the State for the commission to the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, Ore., State Auditor Henry E. Turner was called before the Grand Jury to-day, with his books and papers, to testify in regard to the charges brought by James M. Perkins against Hon. Wilson H. Fairbank, one of the commissioners.

William D. Hawley, deputy State auditor, and James Pope, executive clerk of the department, were also summonsed by Assistant District Attorney Dwyer, who is conducting the investigation on orders from District Attorney Moran.

Mr. Perkins and Miss Ethel Rich, the pretty young stenographer who was charged by Mr. Perkins with having signed receipts for bills against the commission at the request of Mr. Fairbank, were called to tell their stories to the Grand Jury.

FAIRBANK'S COUNSEL IS CALLED

After these two entered the room, Assistant District Attorney Dwyer sent for Charles F. Choate, Jr., who is counsel for Mr. Fairbank. Mr. Dwyer went in with Assistant District Attorney McGettrick.

For one hour and thirty minutes Mr. Choate was kept before the jurors. When he came out he appeared perturbed. With a hasty wave of his hand at those who sought to interview him, he said:

"I haven't a thing to say; nothing whatever." He quickly left the courthouse.

Mr. Choate was followed by State Treasurer Arthur O. F. Chapin. He was in the Grand Jury room for about five minutes.

State Auditor Henry E. Turner, with a big armful of books, entered the room at 11:40.

Mr. Perkins charges in an affidavit that Mr. Fairbank handled the funds of the commission improperly and that he asked Miss Rich to sign receipts for bills rendered.

The Grand Jury assembled for its regular November sitting at 9:30 a. m., when they appeared before Judge Brown and were given the usual instructions. They went to their room at 10 o'clock and the Fairbank case was the first to be presented by Assistant District Attorney Dwyer.

FAIRBANK DENIED RIGHT.

In his affidavit Mr. Perkins, who was secretary to the Massachusetts commissions to the Louisiana Purchase and the Lewis and Clark expositions, says that, as he considered his office dishonored, he made frequent attempts to obtain from Commissioner Fairbank the data of the disbursements made out of the appropriation of the State for the Portland exhibition.

Mr. Perkins said that he also attempted to inspect the check stubs, bank deposit books and account books, in both instances he failed to have the documents produced. He says that Mr. Fairbank, he says, told him that he had no right to inspect the books, that in his official capacity, Mr. Perkins was to be brought the matter to the attention of Governor Guild. Mr. Perkins was told by the Governor, according to the affidavit, "if there is to be any investigation, I am behind it and it ought to be and after election."

HEARING AT STATE HOUSE.

The Governor also said: "Do you want to see Moran elected?" and later, "Are you with me or against me?" The Governor wrote a letter to Mr. Fairbank stating the facts as presented by Mr. Perkins and on Thursday, Oct. 20, Mr. Perkins went to the executive chamber at the State House, accompanied by Miss Ethel Rich, the stenographer to the commission. Mr. Fairbank was present, as were his attorneys, Messrs. Choate and Nash.

Asked to present his charges, Mr. Perkins said that he had been informed by Miss Rich that Commissioner Fairbank had requested her to sign three bills which had been rendered to the commission. At the request of Mr. Fairbank, the young woman had said, she signed the three bills with signatures purporting to be those of the respective creditors.

She had done this in one instance, a bill of the Oregon Transfer Company, because Mr. Fairbank explained that he had lost or mislaid the receipt and needed the voucher to straighten his accounts.

FAIRBANK FILED VOUCHERS.

Miss Rich, according to the affidavit, explained more in detail to Governor Guild the transaction. Asked who had taken these vouchers and filed them at the auditor's office, she said that Mr. Fairbank had.

The Governor asked Mr. Fairbank what he had to say, and Mr. Fairbank's attorneys refused to permit him to say anything.

At the Governor's request, Mr. Perkins and Miss Rich later went to see Attorney-General Malone. They spent four hours going over the facts with Mr. Malone.

On October 29 Attorney-General Malone gave a hearing at which Mr. Fairbank was present with his attorneys. Mr. Perkins and Miss Rich were present, as was Assistant District Attorney M. J. Dwyer. The affair was behind closed doors because, according to Mr. Malone, the room would not hold the fifteen or sixteen extra people who had asked permission to be present.

All the documents were taken by a stenographer. Mr. Fairbank produced his books and they were inspected by Mr. Dwyer and Mr. Perkins.

At the request of the Assistant District Attorney the report of the hearing was not made public because of the investigation to be conducted by the Grand Jury.

It was later discovered that a voucher for $77 had been removed from the State Auditor's office. Mr. Moran in one of his speeches demanded that the Governor should remove Auditor Turner for permitting the voucher to be taken away. Mr. Moran charged that the removal was by Fairbank or some one under him.

FELL FROM WAGON, DYING.

Patrick Irish, aged sixty-two years, the driver of a farmer's wagon, fell from his wagon in Somerville to-day and was run over and probably fatally injured. He was taken to the Somerville Hospital in a dying condition. His home is in Arlington.

Milford Central Labor Union Accuses Him of Employing Spotters to Suppress Unions—Moran and Brown Both Fndorsed.

Milford is next door to Hopedale.

The workingmen of Milford KNOW what conditions prevail in Eben S. Draper's Hopedale works.

Following is a copy of the resolutions recently adopted without a dissenting voice by the Central Labor Union of Milford, representing all organized workingmen in that town:

"Resolved, That we, the delegates of the Milford Central Labor Union, do hereby condemn the candidacy of Eben S. Draper of Hopedale for Lieutenant-Governor, and most heartily indorse the candidacy of E. Gerry Brown for the same position.

"Whereas, Eben S. Draper is and has proved himself the worst foe to organized labor in Massachusetts, and by trickery and opposition disrupted the Moulders' and Machinists' Union, and the Draper Company, of which he is an honored member, is affiliated with the Parrys-Post combine, which uses the spotter system to learn the doings of union meetings, therefore be it further

"Resolved, That we use every honorable means in our power to defeat him at the polls; and be it further

"Resolved, That we combine our united effort with organized labor of this State to bring about the election of E. Gerry Brown of Brookton, whom we know to be an honest, sincere friend of labor, a man who has for years helped to fight the battles of union men against oppression; and be it again further

"Resolved, That we heartily indorse the candidacy of John B. Moran for Governor and pledge ourselves to give him our hearty support."

200,000 FOR HEARST IN NEW YORK SWEEP

FINAL ESTIMATES OF LEADERS SHOW LANDSLIDE FOR PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The Evening Journal says:

William Randolph Hearst will be elected Governor by a plurality that will sweep from New York to Buffalo. It will be a landslide!

HE WILL CARRY THE STATE BY 200,000!

This is the total of the final figures from every county, based on a careful and complete canvass just completed by leaders of both parties. Hearst will COME DOWN TO THE BRONX WITH A BIG PLURALITY.

Counties hitherto Republican have swung to the side of the people's candidate. Tomorrow they will put the record in the ballot boxes.

From twenty to fifty per cent. of the Republican vote in other counties will go to Hearst. Upstate Republican leaders have thrown up their hands. They see no hope.

Odds Drop to Evens.

Woodruff was privately advised to-day that all was lost. This advice was immediately reflected in the betting. Odds dropped to evens before noon on actual wagers with money in sight. Hearst will go up to the Bronx with 150,000 plurality. Manhattan and the Bronx on the latest figures will give him more than 100,000 plurality; Brooklyn is sure for 30,000, perhaps for 40,000; Queens and Richmond will follow in the victorious line.

Hearst will sweep each borough.

Tammany Hall leaders are convinced that New York County alone will more than elect Hearst.

Democratic and Independence League leaders up State in dispatches received up to noon to-day agree that their part of the State by itself will more than carry the entire ticket to victory.

Party Lines Wiped Out.

In the western counties the leaders look for startling results. Coming east, through Monroe, Wayne, Onondaga, Oneida and the other counties to the Hudson, to-day's reports are that the votes of fully 50,000 workingmen, farmers, business men and tradesmen, heretofore an asset of the politicians, are now for Hearst.

Syracuse will strike a blow at the trust candidate that will cost him 2,000 votes.

Utica will increase its Democratic majority. It will add at least 1,000 to the Hearst total.

Schenectady will wipe out all party lines to-morrow.

Binghamton and Broome Counties are counting uncertain, even by the Republican Chairman Farley of the Democratic committee, that Hearst's fully a thousand Republican votes will go for Hearst.

GUILD DEFENDS LOBSTERS, YET IGNORES LABOR

Has Time for Talk About Scallops, Etc., but Passes by Dana Appointment.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, Nov. 5.—The mill operatives of this city could with unanimity Governor Guild's speech at Provincetown Saturday, where he made a plea for the protection of scallops and lobsters, without saying a word in defence of his appointment of Judge Dana as a reward for the latter's treachery in defeating the overtime bill.

The governor at the end of the cape made these remarks:

"It would be easy to prove that the General Court had with great detail considered the necessity, and had passed laws, for the preservation of the game, be it duck, the trout, the grouse and other game that brings the hunter and his money to Cape Cod.

"It would be easy to elaborate upon the fact that the Commonwealth this year has passed laws to aid you to increase the supply of scallops and lobsters."

The operatives in the mills cannot understand why he failed to appear before them and explain his attitude on the overtime bill, and rushed to the defence of scallops and lobsters at Provincetown. The Governor's failure to appear here has discouraged the Republican leaders so much that they look for a tremendous majority for Moran and Brownie!

REPUBLICAN CLUB ENDORSES MORAN AND BROWN

At a meeting of the Polish Independent Republican Club, at the headquarters, No. 169 Derby street, Boston, yesterday, it was unanimously voted to endorse John B. Moran and E. Gerry Brown for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That, believing that the laws would be better enforced, that the interests of all the people will be better served for, and that the common people will be nearer to the government by the election of John B. Moran as Governor and E. Gerry Brown as Lieutenant-Governor, we do hereby unanimously endorse their candidacy and pledge ourselves to their support.

GIVE POLITE APPLAUSE TO GUILD, DRAPER

Leaders at Noon Rally Try to Wake 'Em Up in Faneuil Hall.

In Faneuil Hall Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., and Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper spoke to a large crowd at a noon rally to-day. Former Mayor J. M. W. Hall and Attorney Guy A. Ham contributed the other speeches.

Not a single hearty outburst of enthusiastic applause marked the meeting. Time and again a speaker would hesitate for some encouraging applause, but in each instance the reply was apparent only in blocks of silence that could have been cut with a knife.

Governor Guild waded into, what he termed "yellow journalism." He accused John B. Moran of owning him and Draper, calling him many names and challenged Mr. Moran to hand a like volley toward him in his speeches.

Michael J. Murray presided, and he got some impromptu applause when, in introducing Guild, he said that he would be elected by a margin of 75,000.

Draper Politely Applauded.

Lieutenant-Governor Draper was politely applauded upon rising and concluding. He declared the one issue in the campaign was the tariff, but he did not say where he stood. He declared that he had been abused by E. Gerry Brown, and that a tissue of lies had been in circulation about him, about Hopedale and the conditions there. The Lieutenant-Governor closed his speech by calling John B. Moran a "little white man."

The first speaker of the meeting was Attorney Guy A. Ham, whose remarks were largely introductory. He drew the attention of the crowd to the speakers who would follow. He, too, attacked "yellow papers" and frequently paused for the applause that came not.

Hopes Draper Will See Light.

Former Mayor Hall read his speech, that is, as much of it as the crowd would listen to, for there were calls of "Louder," "Cut it out," and "It's your time to sit down," until he gave way to the Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. Hall got some applause when he read: "It is to be hoped that Lieutenant-Governor Draper would know about the tariff some day, that some time he would see the light of day."

WORCESTER THIRSTY DURING NOON MEAL

WORCESTER, Nov. 6.—For over three hours to-day the city was without water. Every water main in the city was out of commission on account of a break of a forty-inch main at the Holden Reservoir. It was during the noon hour and the restaurants suffered greatly, there being no water to cook with.

ERNEST T WALLS

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, Nov. 5.—In behalf of Emmett T. Walls, candidate for the Senate from the Second Plymouth District, the regular Democratic organization, Wage Earners' clubs and the Independence League are working strenuously.

Mr. Walls is one of the best known labor men of this city, and has been foremost in every effort in recent years to increase the efficiency of organized labor. He has been repeatedly honored by the union men of this city with offices of trust and has always acquitted himself creditably. He is one of the best debaters and speakers among the labor leaders in the State, and his election to the Senate would strengthen the cause of the people and interests of workingmen in the State Senate.

His opponent, Senator George H. Gardner, was absent and unpaired on the day the Overtime bill was killed in the last session.

BROWN CLOSES CAMPAIGN AT MILFORD RALLY

Makes Last Speech To-night At Big Meeting in Next Town to Hope(less) dale.

Special to the Boston American.

MILFORD, Nov. 5.—Everything points to a big and enthusiastic rally in honor of the candidacy of Moran and Brown at the Milford Town Hall to-night. People of this town consider it appropriate that Mr. Brown should be the principal speaker on this occasion and wind up his campaign against Eben S. Draper at this place.

It is said that the ward has been passed along quietly to the employes of the Drapers at Hopedale that they would make a better showing at a rally for Mr. Draper than at a Brown rally. Inasmuch as there is to be no rally for Mr. Draper, this is taken to mean that they should all attend any rally. In spite of this, it is predicted that there will be a great many present from Hopedale to hear the issues of the campaign and the public questions vitally affecting the interests of the people truthfully and ably expounded by Mr. Brown and the Independence League and Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

The rally is to be held under the auspices of the Independence League of Milford, and the Democratic Town Committee, it is expected, will cordially co-operate to make the meeting most successful.

Mr. Brown says that he will refrain from indulging in any personalities relative to the Drapers, particularly his opponent, Eben S. Draper, but intends in a mild and careful way to set forth his views of American principles of fair dealing in contrast to the Drapers' practices at Hopedale. He will be supported in the speechmaking by ex-Mayor John M. Mahoney of Cambridge and Hon. Thomas H. Ross of Boston. Arthur E. Sisgrave of Uxbridge, candidate for the Senate, will preside at the rally and make a brief address. It is expected that Edward Rigg, candidate of the Democratic, Wage Earners and the Independence League for the Legislature, will also speak.

M'ETTRICK BRANDS LIE BY CURLEY MAN

Says the Murphy Circular Is an Insult to the Voters of Ward 17.

The following letter, which explains itself, was received by the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day from Hon. Michael J. McEttrick, the anti-Curley candidate for the House from Ward 17:

EDITOR BOSTON AMERICAN:

A falsifying circular has recently been distributed throughout Ward 17, my home district, by William H. Murphy, a recently defeated caucus candidate for the Legislature, who is now frequently mentioned as the Curleys' Tammany "irregular" candidate.

The circular is not only ridiculous in many respects, but it is an insulting reflection upon the intelligence of a community which hitherto never has been so shamefully misled.

Murphy, to whom its invention would be an impossibility, is made to say:

"One hundred and seventy-five crosses were made below my name which were accounted for me; if they had been, and the intention of the voters was clearly evident that they intended to vote for me, I would have been the regular nominee."

"Insulting Falsehood."

This deception by Murphy and his Curley supporters is an insulting falsehood, because no such amazing mistake has ever been made in the history of our ward or any other in the city of Boston.

Just analyze the pitiable absurdity of his claims that out of his alleged thousand or more voters there were 175 neighbors who were so stupid and ignorant as not to know at 8 o'clock enlightened day of the last trial an ballot law to mark the cross at the right of the name. Then reflect that there were in all five House candidates subject to the very same mistakes in the same caucus, which would swell the total number of such misplaced crosses, were Murphy's contention true, well up to 1,500.

He thus brands almost 50 per cent. of the voters in our district with the same stigma of ignorance with which he insults his own supporters.

His Loss Less Than Others.

The election commissioners will bear me out in this: that there were not 50 such misplaced crosses accredited to the total of the entire five House candidates, as this MICHAEL J. McETTRICK.

FIGHT TO TAKE WARD 17 FROM THE CURLEYS

Election of McEttrick, Drew and Connolly Will Shatter Their Power.

Ward 17 has for years been dominated by the Curley machine. There is a distinct fight this year to take the district entirely out of their hands and return the government of the ward to the people.

Former Congressman Michael J. McEttrick, now a member of the House of Representatives, is running for re-election upon his record, which, in National and State House, is one of the cleanest in the history of the country. He beat the Curleys in the primaries. He has the endorsement of the Independence League. He is supported by every honest Independent citizen in his ward. There seems no doubt that he will win and that in his victory the Curleys will suffer another deserved defeat.

Michael S. Drew is another Independent candidate who is hostile to the Curley machine. He, too, has the endorsement of the Independence League. A vote for McEttrick and Drew is a vote against the corrupt machine domination of the past in the ward.

For Senator in the district, which includes Wards 9, 12 and 17, the notorious "Tom" Curley himself is running. Against him is Timothy L. Connolly, who has made many a powerful fight against the Curley interests. He has the backing of the Independents and of the Independence League, and he and his friends are freely predicting that he will carry the district.

If these three candidates are elected the Curleys' hold in Ward 17 will be irrevocably shattered.

AMERICAN'S BULLETINS GIVE NEWS FIRST

Will Flash Election Results in Adams Square and Summer Street.

Early and accurate news of the results of the elections throughout the country will be flashed upon the bulletins of the BOSTON AMERICAN to-morrow evening as one of the most central and accessible points in the city.

One of these displays will be at the juncture of Summer and Devonshire streets, practically in front of the office of the BOSTON AMERICAN. The other will be at Adams square, where the news bulletins will be thrown from the big building of the Leopold Morse Company across to that occupied by the firm of Holmes, Luce & Co.

Especial efforts will be made to get and display the first results from the States of Massachusetts and New York, where will have been fought two of the most hotly contested political battles that ever took place in this country.

Every resident of Boston and its suburbs will want to know at the earliest possible moment the outcome of the fight between Guild and Moran—also the result of the very interesting contest between Eben S. Draper and E. Gerry Brown. They will be able to get these facts from the BOSTON AMERICAN'S bulletins.

Massachusetts residents are also deeply interested in the result of the election in New York State, where W. R. Hearst is a candidate for Governor on the Independence League and Democratic tickets against Charles E. Hughes, the choice of the Republican machine. The news from New York will be found on the AMERICAN'S bulletin boards.

There are elections in nearly all of the States in the Union to-day. In the twelve candidates for Governor. All the news from the whole country will be displayed at the two points mentioned.

Especially interesting figures will come over the wires of the powerful Associated Press telegraph machine will be interspersed with the news that will serve to relieve the occasion and shorten the hours of waiting.

NEW SOUTHERN LINE FREIGHTER LAUNCHED

QUINCY, Nov. 5.—Mrs. C. L. Dimon, wife of the general manager of the steamship company, christened the Shawmut at 12:25 o'clock to-day and the big 5,000-ton freighter will soon begin her runs between Brunswick, Ga., and New York and Providence. She is owned by the Brunswick Steamship Company.

This Is Out of Date in State Street

But Read It

Will our readers pardon the publication of an unfashionable letter from an unfashionable man?

Lincoln wrote this letter, addressed to H. L. Pierce and others, forty-seven years ago. Already he had found that men were beginning to feel that the Declaration of Independence was a LITTLE out of date.

What would Lincoln say now, when the official statement is made by a Republican administration that a workingman is not fit to be Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts, that "divine right" gave the coal lands for all time to Mr. Baer and his associates—the people being too IGNORANT—and that only trusts, representing hundreds of millions, are fit to exercise the powers of government?

Here is what Lincoln said:

The principles of Jefferson are the definitions and axioms of free society. And yet they are denied and evaded, with no small show of success. One dashingly calls them "glittering generalities," another bluntly calls them "self-evident lies," and others insidiously argue that they apply to "superior races." Their expressions differing in form are identical in object and effect—the supplanting of the principles of free government and restoring those of classification, caste and legitimacy. They would delight a convocation of crowned heads plotting against the people.

They are the vanguard, the miners and sappers of returning despotism. We must repulse them or they will subjugate us.

Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves, and, under a just God, can not long retain it. All honor to Jefferson—to the man who, in the concrete pressure of a struggle for national independence by a single people, had the coolness, forecast and capacity to introduce into a merely revolutionary document an abstract truth, applicable to all men and all times and so to embalm it there that to-day and in all coming days it shall be a rebuke and a stumbling block to the very harbingers of reappearing tyranny and oppression.

What do you think Lincoln would say to Rogers, Guston, Whitney, Wardwell and Draper?

Declares Governor Is Opposed to Every Plank for Good of People in Democratic Platform

MORAN PUTS ISSUES SQUARELY IN OPEN LETTER TO GUILD

SAYS HE CAN JUSTIFY EVERY ACT OF HIS OWN

FAILING to induce Governor Guild to meet him on the public platforms for a joint discussion on the issues of the campaign, John B. Moran last night addressed an open letter to his opponent in the fight for the Governorship, charging him by his silence with opposing every plank in the Democratic platform for the good of the people, scoring him for replying to his questions by personal abuse, defending his own record as District Attorney, and asking a last roll upon the Governor to come out and state his position upon the vital State issues of the campaign. Following is Mr. Moran's letter:

Curtis Guild, Jr.,
Republican Candidate for Governor:

DEAR SIR—Upon the public platform from the beginning of the campaign till now I have charged that the platform of the Republican party is built on national lines and contains no plank or pledge as to what the Republican party would do in relation to legislation concerning State issues. I have maintained that there were in the platform adoped by the Democratic party thirty odd planks relating to State issues to the enactment of which, as law, I pledged my earnest efforts, if elected Governor.

Nightly I questioned you as to what position you take on each of these State issues. You have made no reply. For the purpose of compelling you to make some response, I, in my capacity, as a candidate, challenged you to a joint discussion in your capacity as a candidate.

Opposed to Platform.

You declined to meet me, stating that it was beneath your dignity as a Governor to appear in joint debate. I did not in my capacity as District Attorney challenge you in your capacity as Governor.

Whatever dignity may attach to the office of Governor is laid aside when the man holding office of Governor appears upon the public platform advocating his own reelection.

Your reason for not meeting me in joint discussion was not the fear of injury to your dignity, but was the fear that you would not be able to escape making reply to the series of questions which I would put to you upon the State issues.

Your failure to reply to the questions which I have put you, and your failure to meet me in joint discussion, there to reply to the questions publicly, justifies me in assuming that you are opposed to every plank in our platform, and that you fear to state your position and your reasons therefor.

Piles Charge on Charge.

I now charge that you are opposed to the enactment, as law, of the thirty odd propositions contained in the Democratic platform, every one of which I favor.

I charge that you are opposed to granting trial by jury to persons charged with violating injunctions.

I charge that you are opposed to legislation which shall compel wealth to pay its full and reasonable contribution to the expenses of our Government.

I charge that you are opposed to a drastic law against private monopoly with imprisonment penalties only.

I charge that you are opposed to the passage of stringent laws as to raising of the price of necessities, by conspiracy or other unlawful means, with imprisonment penalties only.

I charge that you are opposed to the enactment of laws providing for taking of public utility plants by municipal corporations.

I charge that you are opposed to the enactment of laws with imprisonment penalties only for wilful negligence of public officials.

Against Showing Mercy.

I charge that you are opposed to the liberation of prisoners awaiting trial for misdemeanors without the requirement of bail.

I charge that you are opposed to laws requiring the District Attorneys to investigate all divorce cases and to appear in each one in behalf of the Commonwealth.

I charge that you are opposed to laws providing for the nomination of all candidates for elective office by direct vote.

I charge that you are opposed to the passage of laws requiring the District Attorney to appear in all majority proceedings in behalf of the person accused.

I charge that you are opposed to liberal treatment of Civil War veterans within the limits of judicially declared law.

I charge that you are opposed to the abolition of triple-headed commissioners and the establishment, in place thereof, of single-headed commissioners.

I charge that you are opposed to shorter terms of service for Superior Jurors.

I charge that you are opposed to the passage of laws draining want out-door of Grand Juries, and by returning and providing penalties therefor.

A Severe Indictment.

I charge that you are opposed to laws providing for the Initiative and the referendum and for the recall of faithless legislators.

I charge that you are opposed to the enactment of laws as to employers' liability more protective of employés.

I charge that you are opposed to laws providing that judges a setting under verdicts shall in writ g assign the reasons therefor, reviewable by the Supreme Court.

I charge that you are opposed to laws more stringent as to the receipt, expenditure and accounting of money by campaign committees, and limiting the amount thereof.

I charge that you are opposed to the passage of more effective and more drastic election laws.

I charge that you are opposed to the repeal of the legislative agent act, and to the enactment of laws making lobbying a crime.

I charge that you are opposed to the repeal of the legislative communicating act which enables a Legislature to guarantee to itself and all the witnesses that it calls before it immunity from criminal prosecution.

I charge that you are opposed to more stringent and more effective laws against bucket shops.

I charge that you are opposed to laws abolishing capital punishment.

Let Overtime Bill Be Killed.

I charge that you are in favor of the appointment of personal friends and the sons of your father's personal friends to the judiciary, even when the person to be appointed has demonstrated by his brief legal career that he was the friend of corporations and the enemy of the people.

I charge that while you now claim to be in favor of an overtime bill you neglected to state your position in relation to it in your inaugural, and that while the matter was pending before the Senate you preferred silent as to your then views, and allowed your friend Luce to kill it at a time when, if you had had the courage to raise your voice, you could have brought about the passage of that law.

I charge that you and the Republican Legislature, early in the year, enacted legislation protecting the aristocratic violators of the Junior law in Boston, while you and a Republican Legislature refused until the middle of June to pass a law providing for extra assistance for the District Attorney of Suffolk County.

I charge you and your speakers upon the platform, instead of defining your position and the Republican position upon these various State issues, have carefully evaded them, and have, instead of replying to my questions, characterized me in abusive terms as a mob-leader, a Cossack, a lieutenant of Cossacks, a Socialist, a Roisesplerre, a Marat.

Answered With Abuse.

I have presented arguments, which you and your speakers have answered with abuse. I have carefully refrained from characterizing you or any of your speakers in harsh terms. I have met their abuse with facts and with argument. You have attempted to arouse religious and race prejudice.

Throughout the State Republican papers have, with your approval, dwelt at length on race and religion, all subjects which ought never to be introduced by American politics, and which, when introduced, are appeals to ignorance and bigotry. In doing so you have degraded yourself and you have insulted the intelligence of Massachusetts citizenship.

I have never recognized and never will recognize any religious or racial distinctions in political life. They are not recognized in the Constitutions of our country and our State. He who does injustice to others, and he who appeals to them, is an enemy of his city, his State and his country. In American politics we are all American citizens.

Instead of replying to the questions on State issues which I have put to you, you and your speakers have criticised me and my conduct in the office of the District Attorney, and in doing so you have caused figures to be by the mouths of them, and you have singled out a half dozen individual cases from the thirty odd hundred cases which I have examined and made recommendations upon during my term of office from December 1, 1905, to October 1, 1906.

407 More Cases Handled.

From a carefully prepared statement made by the assistant clerk of the Superior Criminal Court, I find that when I took the office of District Attorney, on the 1st of December, 1905, there were then pending 207 cases left by my predecessor. I find that during the ten months of my service, December 1, 1905, to October 1, there came to my office from the Grand Jury and from the Lower Court, 3,100 cases which, added to the 207 cases which I inherited from my predecessor, made a total of 3,307 cases.

I find that on October 1, 1906, there were still pending 450 of these cases. Subtracting the 450 from 3,307 leaves 2,857 cases as the total number disposed of by me during my ten months of service.

I find that during the ten months of my predecessor's service, corresponding to my ten months, there came from the Lower Court and Grand Jury 2,700 cases. Subtracting the 2,450 the 207 which he left over, and which I found awaiting me on the 1st of December, 1905, we have 2,450 cases as the total number disposed of by him during his ten months of service.

Subtracting 2,450, the total number disposed of by him in his ten months, from 2,857, the total number disposed of by me in my first ten months, leaves 407 as the number which I disposed of in excess of what he disposed of in his ten months.

Hands Tied by Legislature.

You and your speakers have criticised me because I have failed to complete my investigations on two or three large cases. You neglect to state the reason for my failure.

The fact is when I entered the office of District Attorney in December, I found that the entire time of the District Attorney and his two assistants was required to attend to the routine work of the office, to 400 cases which came to us each month.

Realizing that I could not, with such limited assistance, prepare any outside investigations, I, in the first week in January, 1906, laid before the Legislature an earnest appeal to appoint two additional assistants and such other emergency assistance as the Chief Justice of the Superior Court would approve of from time to time. Therefore I argued to legislative committees the necessity for the immediate passage of this act. I informed them and my statements made before them were published in the daily papers that their failure to give me the power to appoint additional assistants engaged in doing the work on outside cases which I had prosecuted the public interest.

Notwithstanding the necessity for the enactment of a law giving me authority to immediately appoint additional assistants, the Legislature refused to act until the middle of June. For five and a half months, during the most trying time of the year, the Legislature tied my hands. The law, as it came to me, in case of cases which were being prosecuted from the lower courts and Grand Jury month by month.

Law Forbade Neglect of Routine.

I could hold no special sessions of the Grand Jury for outside investigations without neglecting the routine work of the office, and the law forbade my doing immediately upon the passage of the law in June authorizing the appointment of additional assistants, I selected a Republican, John S. Richardson, a lawyer of active work for a few weeks to familiarize himself with the duties of the office, and me him with the duties of the special session of the Grand Jury, worked in conjunction with me for a few weeks to prepare contractors, and had my two assistants, Mr. Dwyer and Mr. Hildreth, present the evidence against other Fenway contractors to the Grand Jury. That kept the Grand Jury busy during all the time it could devote to a special session, but we failed to finish for want of time the Fenway investigation.

In August I held no special sitting of the Grand Jury, because of the fact that I allowed my subordinates, with the exception of an assistant, to try cases, to take their vacations. Working in the office of the District Attorney during the month of August, I, with the assistant whom I retained at work in the court room, disposed of 411 cases. In September we had another special sitting of the Grand Jury, and we took up several outside cases, also the Chelsea graft case, involving many Chelsea officials, and the Day forgery case.

Paid Lawyers Himself.

We arranged for another special sitting of the Grand Jury for October 18, but that sitting was adjourned because of the fact that I had spent ten days previously been taken too ill to continue my work during the time while I was waiting for the Legislature to pass a law providing for extra assistants, and, subsequently, employed several lawyers and paid them out of my own pocket to work upon various outside cases and to prepare them for the Grand Jury.

Among these cases were charges against the State Prison officials, charges against members of the Legislature, charges against the Ice Corporation, and concerning charges against bucket-shop gamblers and charges against the Provident Security and Savings Bank Company.

During my term of office I have detected my time excessively to the county's business, working often until 8 or 9 o'clock at night and sometimes Sundays. I have taken not a single day of vacation, although custom allows two months at a time. Had the Legislature in January passed a bill for the assistance which I then asked for, all of the cases now pending and concerning which you and your speakers make complaints, would for have been finished.

The fault lies not with me but with you and your party. That this delay in furnishing me with assistants for five months was made a political purpose is now evident. You hastened to legislate for the State's criminals, you refused to legislate for the Commonwealth, as represented by the District Attorney.

You have also charged that I nol prossed or threw out of court more cases than my predecessor did in a corresponding length of time. I nol prossed every case which on an examination of the evidence on both sides seemed to me to be one which could be tried.

I paid no attention to the number of them. I decided each one of them on its own merits. You charge that I put an undue number of cases in the same length of time than my predecessor did. I prosecuted for prosecution every man, woman and child in whom I thought there was conceivable hope of conviction. My recommendations were agreed to by the proper officers, and were approved of by the court.

Decided Each on Merits

You have charged that I liberated my large number of persons charged with misdemeanors on one day, and you have called it a jail delivery. I was assisted by the sheriff that the jail was overcrowded. I sent one of my subordinates accompanied by a probation officer, to interview every one of the persons in jail who were waiting trial during in our court.

I had the record of each one of them examined by the probation officer, and then I, taking the report of my subordinate and the probation officer, passed judgment on each individual case, and made my recommendation to the court, which recommendation was adopted. I have recommended probation when it was proper, regardless of the number of persons for whom I recommended it. I recommended sentence whenever I deemed it proper, regardless of the number of persons for whom I recommended it.

In performing the duties of my office I have considered each individual case as a case by itself, and have made such recommendation as a careful examination of all the facts on both sides warranted. I have paid no heed to politicians and I have had no regard for the personality of the lawyers who appeared for the defendants. I have investigated Republicans and Democrats alike.

In the District Attorney's office I know no distinction between one class of persons and another. I sought to do justice to everybody, and the political consequences of my acts were never considered by me.

I have upon the platform slightly given in detail the reasons for my action in every case concerning which you and your speakers have criticised me. I am able to give publicly the reason for my action in every one of the thirty-one printed odd cases in which I made recommendations of one kind or another. I have not attempted to evade any question put to me by you.

You, not the contrary, have evaded my questions. Upon every plank in our platform I have taken my position. I have sought by every means possible to make you state your position. You have to date refrained from replying to my questions.

I again ask you to state where you stand in relation to the planks of my platform outlined in the early portion of this statement.

Respectfully yours,
JOHN B. MORAN.

Moran Says Guild Feared to Answer His Questions

Your reason for not meeting me in joint discussion was not the fear of injury to your dignity, but was the fear that you would not be able to escape making reply to the series of questions which I would put to you upon the State issues.

Your failure to reply to the questions which I have put you, and your failure to meet me in joint discussion, there to reply to the questions publicly, justifies me in assuming that you are opposed to every plank in our platform, and that you fear to state your position and your reasons therefor.—From John B. Moran's letter to Governor Curtis Guild, Jr.

ROBBED BY MASKED MAN AT PISTOL POINT

Southbridge Milkman Is Held Up by Highwayman at Noon.

THIEF GETS AWAY WITH $80

Special to the Boston American.

SOUTHBRIDGE, Nov. 6—Louis Torrey, a milkman, was held up and robbed of $80 by a masked highwayman on the road between this town and Charlton at noon today. A revolver was relied on by the highwayman, demanding that he should give up all he had.

The robber was dressed in the ordinary blue, when he sought a ride that took him in the direction of Worcester and Boston.

Mr. Torrey was driving along the well traveled road when the stranger accosted him and a figure jumped into the middle of the highway. Mr. Torrey saw that a gun was levelled at his head and that the man who held him up was masked.

Mixed up everything for him to say and be quick about it, the robber said.

There was nothing for Mr. Torrey to do but hand over the money. Seeing it the highwayman commanded the milkman to drive on in a hurry and not attempt to give an alarm.

There is said to be some friction in the police force of this town, and it was some time before the alarm was sent out after Mr. Torrey had reported to the police.

The highwayman is described as about 5 feet 10 inches in height, thin, with black moustache and wearing dark clothes.

TRICK IN 11TH OF NO AVAIL

Throughout the Eleventh congressional district supporters of Andrew J. Peters for Congress said to-day that the eleventh hour trick of sending out a circular advising voters to support Moran and Lane would be of little avail. Everywhere it was hailed as conclusive evidence that the Republicans have abandoned all hope of carrying a district that was cut out to be Republican but which has been Democratic from the start. The "Moran-and-Lane" trick was exposed and condemned to-day by Chairman McClellan of the Democratic City Committee.

Andrew J. Peters will receive the support of every Democrat and thousands of Republicans in the district. His legislative labor record is unimpeachable. Yesterday his efforts, backed by twenty-four other speakers, Mr. Peters addressed three big meetings in Wards 18 and 19, talking to 2,000 voters at the Valley Club in Columbus avenue, the Unity Club at Roxbury Crossing and the Young Men's Democratic Club at Hampshire and Whittier streets.

NEPHEW TELLS QUEER ACTIONS OF STEINERT

TESTIFIES, IN WILL FIGHT, OF UNCLE SNAPPING CRUMBS AT HOTEL GUESTS.

How the late William Steinert, whose will disposing of $200,000 is the subject of a contest in the Probate Court for Suffolk, startled the night clerk of a fashionable hotel at 3 o'clock in the morning with a request that the pinboys be called from bed and the bowling alleys opened, how he proposed marriage to the wife of his brother, and how he left a $7 dinner at a Boston hotel without touching it to go to a "hash house," as the witness called it, and satisfy himself with fifty cents' worth, were among the things told about on the witness stand to-day by his nephew, Dr. Lee Shoolinger, Harvard Medical '04.

The young physician loses a $15,000 bequest if the will is set aside.

By Mr. Steinert's will, drawn in September, 1902, he left practically all of his $200,000 estate to his brother Alexander, now the head of the Steinert piano houses.

Claim Undue Influence.

The business was founded by their father, Morris Steinert of New Haven, Ct., who now seeks to break the will on the ground of undue influence and on the further ground that William was already of unsound mind when the will was drawn.

Dr. Lee Shoolinger, a nephew, had been William Steinert's constant companion. The 1 o'clock in the morning request for a bowling alley, Dr. Shoolinger testified, was made in July, 1901, at the fashionable Farrington at Richfield Springs, N. Y. His uncle didn't get the alley. The gentlemanly clerk urged that three were a few other guests in the house and that most of them were fast asleep.

Tells of Crumb-Throwing.

In the main dining hall, Dr. Shoolinger testified, Mr. Steinert was in the habit of playfully rolling remains of bread into ball like shapes and snapping them at guests whom he did not know. This was also testified that Fall in the Hotel Brunswick, Boston.

At Richfield Springs Mr. Steinert went out upon the golf links and the tennis court in the middle of the afternoon in full evening dress.

Once, Dr. Shoolinger said, his uncle invited him to dine at the Brunswick. The dinner was Steinert's. When it was ready he paid for it, left before a quarrel was provoked said: "Come on, Lee, let's go out somewhere where we can get something good to eat."

They went to a "hash house," Dr. Shoolinger testified, where the bill was 50 cents.

Proposals of Marriage.

In May, 1902, Steinert entertained at dinner his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ed. Steinert, with Dr. Shoolinger and Miss Lillian Pallup of New York, now Mrs. Mayer. During the dinner, the witness said, the uncle repeatedly proposed marriage to Mrs. Ed. Steinert. He seemed to be serious, and insisted that the ceremony be performed at once. Afterward, on the way to a theatre, the proposal was repeated several times.

Success In the Gulf Coast Country

Every Monday and Thursday there will appear in the columns of this paper an example of what has been done in farming in the Gulf Coast Country on the Brownsville Line.

$100 from an eighth acre of Celery.

Mr. Chas. Lindsey, of Olmito, Tex., is the pioneer celery raiser in the Gulf Coast Country. He had no experience in raising it and it had not before been tried in that country. This Spring, as an experiment, he planted an eighth acre. The crop sold for $100. Judge for yourself what the result would be if you should plant five or ten acres and give it the proper care.

If you will write Mr. Lindsey, at Olmito, he will tell you more about his wonderful success.

Making money seems to be the easiest thing in the world for the Gulf Coast farmer. But he gains more than that. He makes a home for himself in a climate like that of Southern California—mild in Winter and cooled by Gulf breezes in Summer.

Wouldn't you like to have a small farm in the Gulf Coast County where success does not depend on uncertain weather with irregular rainfall?

Now the land is cheap and you can get it on easy terms. Twenty acres will cost you about $500. The cost of clearing it is about $5 an acre. The cost of water for irrigation varies. You may want an artesian well of your own; you may get water from some river; or you may get it from your neighbor. But the cost is not great, and those who have tried it have netted from the first crop a sum which has paid all expenses and left a good surplus.

Take a trip down there and see for yourself—that's the best way. Every first and third Tuesday of each month, we sell round-trip tickets to any point in the Gulf Coast Country and return, at the following rates:

From Chicago,	$25.00
From St. Louis,	20.00
From Kansas City,	20.00
From Peoria,	23.00
From St. Paul,	27.50
From Minneapolis,	27.50

These tickets will be good 30 days and they will permit you to stop over at any point.

Let me send you our books describing the wonderful crops produced in this marvelous country. Don't delay, write me to-day.

Boston, Nov. 4, 1906.

Hon. William Travers Jerome, District Attorney,

Dear Sir:

I am credibly informed by one A. D. Hughes, formerly a State Senator in Michigan, that there is in the possession of the proprietors of a publication, by name Collier's Weekly, having its general place of business in New York City, evidence in the form of original documents, letters, telegrams, secret codes and the transaction thereof, some copies of which I now have and which I append herewith for the purpose of identification, which tends to show an organized, systematic and general method of legislative corruption practiced by the so-called Tobacco Trust throughout the country.

Lead to Boston State House

I am informed that some of the documents, copies of which I do not have, tend to show that several bills affecting the interests of the said Tobacco Trust were defeated at the capitol of this Commonwealth at the last session of our General Court by practices which are a part of this systematic scheme.

I am further informed that the proprietors of the said Collier's Weekly have purchased the evidence for a large sum of money under a contract to publish same not later than ten weeks after the first of August; that the last day for publishing the same has expired; that the said Collier's Weekly has refused to publish the same according to that contract.

I am further informed that Collier's Weekly is doing so publication of this evidence in violation of its contract until after election, but it should have an injurious effect on Republican candidates on election day.

Therefore, I respectfully request you to obtain the said evidence and transmit to me forthwith in order that I may begin an immediate inquiry into such acts occurring within my jurisdiction as may be disclosed by an examination of the said documents.

Respectfully yours,
JOHN B. MORAN,
District Attorney for Suffolk County.

A. D. Hughes, who is referred to in the correspondence, makes this written statement as to how he came in possession of the letters:

"In April, 1906, I bought a factory situated at Marion, Ind., which formerly belonged to ex-Senator O. A. Baker, who had been a professional lobbyist for the American Tobacco Company for ten or twelve years, but who was at the time of the purchase of the factory by me an exile from justice, on account of a sensational exposure made by the Hon. L. Baker, a member of the lower branch of the Legislature, who during the last session arose from his seat in the House, tore open an envelope, which contained five $20 bills, waved them above his head, and declared that he had received them from O. A. Baker for his vote against a bill regulating the sale of cigarettes in Indiana.

"O. A. Baker thereupon fled, and the Legislature appropriated $5,000 for his capture and conviction for bribery.

"In Baker's hurried departure he left in the factory purchased by me a desk full of correspondence and documents revealing his transactions with the American Tobacco Company, which, on coming into possession of the factory, I found. Having obtained information that Baker, if promised immunity, would tell all he knew, involving men prominent in public life in the State of Indiana and elsewhere, I endeavored to interest President Roosevelt and Governor Hanley of Indiana to obtain such immunity for Baker.

Contract With Collier's.

"After many unsuccessful endeavors, I despaired of my success in this direction, and sold the documents to Collier's Weekly under a contract by which Collier's Weekly agreed to publish the evidence not later than the fifth of October current.

"Through the influence of prominent Republican officials, who received news of the existence of this evidence, and who were convinced that the publication would be injurious to the Republican candidates, Collier's Weekly has refused to live up to its contract, and now declines to publish the evidence until after election, notwithstanding the obligations of its contract to do so, and refuses to return to me the evidence in their possession, notwithstanding my offer to return the money received in payment for the evidence, and a bonus of $2000 besides.

"ARTHUR D. HUGHES."

Mr. Hughes has supplied Mr. Moran with copies of letters between Baker and various Tobacco Trust officials, the trust's code; letters from President Roosevelt referring Hughes to the New York United States district attorney, and a copy of Collier's letter accepting the evidence which Hughes says has not been used.

"INTERESTS" MAKE SECRET FIGHT TO TURN DOWN MOCK

Representative Jacob H. Mock of Ward 22, the member of the Legislature who brought about the exposure of the corruption in the bucket shop bill, is making a strong fight for re-election in his district, and the interests he exposed are secretly working against him. Representative Mock's record is one of punctuality at sessions of the Legislature, in favor of all labor measures and opposition to raids of corporations.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Boston Central Labor Union yesterday adopted an amendment to its constitution declaring that all building trades union affiliated with it must join the building trades section of the C. L. U. within thirty days, and that the C. L. U. building trades section is the only bona fide building trades central body in this city.

The union received a letter from the trustees of the Boston Consumptive Hospital stating that they will be able to provide quarters in a private hospital for not more than thirty needy tuberculosis patients who are residents of Boston.

It was announced that ten contractors are working for the city in street jobs, who are working their employes nine hours a day instead of eight, are not paying the recognized wage rates, and many are employing non-citizens. The building trades section was directed to at once take up the matter.

After hearing a delegation from the State branch, A. F. of L., the C. L. U. condemned Senator John J. Sullivan, Jr., candidate for the Boston Board of Aldermen, and elected a committee to assist in an effort to defeat him.

Resolutions were adopted indorsing Aldermen Kneeland for his advocacy of a report from the lighting committee of the Board of Aldermen and calling upon affiliated unions to use all honorable methods to defeat the board.

SEAMEN TO MEET IN HUB.

The Seamen's Union international convention will be held in this city, beginning Monday, December 3. Stillman Hall, No. 46 Stillman street, has been engaged for the convention and the Boston seamen, marine firemen and other affiliated crafts will give the international officers and delegates a convention supper Saturday, December 8.

About fifty delegates will be at the convention, representing the Pacific, Atlantic, gulf and lake organizations of seamen, firemen, mates, cooks, fishermen and other affiliated crafts.

BOILERMAKERS MEET.

The Boston, New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, Worcester, Providence and Keene, N. H., unions were represented at the district convention of boilermakers in Boston yesterday. Under the new international constitution, which went into effect this month, the district will henceforth include not only the New England States, but a portion of Canada, is given power to declare and settle strikes, to call support, financial and otherwise, and in general is given almost the same power as the international executive board.

LABOR NOTES.

Somerville Painters' Union has called a special meeting for to-night in Hill building, Somerville, on trade matters.

It was decided at yesterday's meeting of Transatlantic Steamship Clerks' Benev. No. 1,048, K. of L., to ask for an increase of wages.

Flat Trimmers' Union, the quarterly meeting of which was postponed to-morrow night, will meet Thursday night at No. 694 Washington street.

A new union of Italian paving and rammermen was organized in this city yesterday by Dominic D'Alessandro, special A. F. of L. organizer for District.

CANDIDATE FOR

REGISTER OF DEEDS

HAS PROVED

1—That it takes six weeks for recording in Suffolk county, while in other counties in Massachusetts it takes only two weeks; that in New York and Philadelphia it requires only three weeks, in Chicago one week and in Baltimore ten days.

2—That in Suffolk county under the present inadequate system attachments may be discharged fraudulently, and wage earners, employes and other plaintiffs may be deprived of their right to recover damages in suits for injuries, and the widow and children of a man who is killed by negligence of others may lose the benefit of their right of action, and the poor house will stare them in the face.

3—That under the "present system" it requires months to have marginal references made in the original record when discharges of mortgages and assignments are filed, to the great confusion, disadvantage and inconvenience of the public and the members of the bar.

4—That information cannot be readily obtained regarding the registration of titles under the Land Court act.

5—That the present arrangement of the record books results in over-crowding the registry and does not accommodate the public.

6—That mistakes have frequently occurred, and when discovered and reported to the register by attorneys they have not been corrected promptly, as they should be.

The above are only a few defects of the present system. Your own attorney can enumerate many others.

IRELAND SOLID FOR HOME RULE, SAYS ENVOY

Elated at Result of the By-Election. Victory for Nationalists.

PLEAD CAUSE IN LOWELL

Elated at the election of Hon. Stephen Lucius Gwynn, a Nationalist, in Galway, Ireland, Saturday, the young Irish envoys, Thomas M. Keith and Richard Hazelton, last night congratulated Irish on the result at Hotel Bellevue, where they are guests of the United Irish League.

"The election proves that Ireland is still solid for home rule and that the most recent efforts of the devolutionists have come to naught. It shows that the unity of the Nationalist party has not been broken. The greater significance of the election, however, is that it marked the first trial between the devolutionist element and the old home rule idea. Only a few years ago this same constituency which has elected Mr. Gwynn was represented by a strong Unionist."

Last evening Messrs. Keith and Hazleton went to Lowell, where they addressed a meeting in Associates' Hall. A large delegation of Boston friends of the Irish cause accompanied them.

WAIF'S MOTHER AGAIN MISSING

The Cambridge police are at a loss to explain why Mrs. Jennie Campbell, the mother of the child found on the street last week and identified Saturday by Mrs. Elizabeth Brodeur, has disappeared again. Mrs. Campbell was in Cambridge Saturday night, calling at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. W. H. Jones, No. 452 Massachusetts avenue, and at No. 6 Douglass street, the home of Mrs. Brodeur. At the latter place she promised to call again Sunday night to settle for the child's board.

No charges have been made against the woman, as she appears to have acted in good faith in leaving the child with Mrs. Brodeur. The babe is at the City Home.

THREE MORE UNIONS SCORE GUILD, DRAPER

Hail Moran and Brown as the Friends of Organized Labor in the Bay State.

HAVE SOUGHT AID IN VAIN

Three more labor organizations have indorsed the candidacies of John B. Moran for Governor and E. Gerry Brown for Lieutenant-Governor, and at the same time condemned Curtis Guild, Jr., and Eben S. Draper. They are:

Foxboro and Norwood Moulders' Union No. 323.

Central Labor Union of Waltham.

Local No. 259 of the International Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of Quincy.

Resolutions indorsing Moran and Brown and condemning Guild and Draper were unanimously adopted by the Foxboro and Norwood Moulders' Union, last night, as follows:

Foxboro and Norwood Moulders.

Resolved, That we, the members of the Foxboro and Norwood Moulders' Union No. 323, endorse the candidacy of John B. Moran, of Boston, for Governor and E. Gerry Brown, of Brookline for Lieutenant-Governor, believing them to be true and sincere friends of organized labor.

Whereas, Eben S. Draper, Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, has declared himself to be the tool, the "creature" of the people of Massachusetts, and by his unfairness and unwarranted interference has insulted the Moulders' and Machinists' Unions.

Resolved, That we use every honorable means to defeat Draper at the polls.

Resolved, That we use every honorable means to defeat Lieutenant-Governor Draper at the polls.

Waltham Central Labor Union.

Declaring that the interests of organized labor demand the election of John B. Moran and E. Gerry Brown, the Central Labor Union of Waltham condemned the candidacy of Eben S. Draper for Lieutenant-Governor in the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, public officials, either municipal, State or national, are public servants, and are bound to give a faithful account of the trust, etc., reposed in them by the people, be it

Resolved, That we, as citizens, refuse to be longer unmindful of the actions of those we honor with positions, and if we find them true to their trust it is our duty to support them. If we find them false to our laws calls upon us to defeat them.

"For years we have been knocking at our legislative doors looking for protection, but to no satisfaction, and in many instances Corporations throughout the State have decided to put a stop to unionism in their works by having all their union employes agree that they will not join a union. In a like manner the present candidate for Lieutenant-Governor on the Republican ticket has killed unionism in his town."

Quincy Street Railway Men.

The Street Railway men of the Quincy district have joined the ranks of the friends of organized labor in Massachusetts which have condemned Guild and Draper and have rallied upon their support the cause for Moran and Brown. At a meeting of Local No. 259 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes resolutions to this effect were enthusiastically adopted.

GIRDER FALLS; 1 MAN KILLED

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—At least one man was killed and several injured by the falling of a steel girder at the new station of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad on Park avenue today. The girder crashed through the temporary flooring, smashing the heavy supporting beams like straw stems. One man undoubtedly was killed.

Two ambulances were summoned and the entire reserve force of the East Fifty-third street station was detailed to help handle the excited crowds of workmen.

FIND RUNAWAY BOYS STARVING

WORCESTER, Nov. 5.—August Stahl, sixteen years old, and Fred Gough, fourteen, both of Providence, were found at the Union station early today almost starved. The boys were taken to police headquarters and booked as runaways. They were given food, and ate ravenously.

The boys said they left Providence over a week ago with $3 Stahl took from his father. They went to Boston and worked the manor. Then they came to Worcester on a freight. Both declared they had had nothing to eat since Thursday.

MRS. PEARY TO JOIN HUSBAND

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Peary, wife of Commander Robert Peary, the Arctic explorer, will join her husband at Cape Breton, she said today, en route for the north country today to await the arrival of her husband after his dash for the Pole.

Mrs. Peary did not know whether Commander Peary would make another attempt to reach the Pole, but said she thought her husband had done his work in the Arctic and that he had earned a rest.

FR. MALLEY SPEAKS AT HARVARD TO-NIGHT

NEW YORK SOCIETY SHOCKED BY DE CASTELLANE LOVE LETTERS

Friends of Anna Gould Astonished by the Measure of the Countess' Misery.

Epistles to and from Other Women Figuring in Divorce Suit Against Boni.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The full misery of Anna Gould's wedded life, and the utter abandon of the principles of ordinary rightliving by her titled husband, Count Boni de Castellane, from whom the Countess is seeking to be divorced, are startlingly revealed to her New York friends in the publication of love letters which were written by the husband to other women and letters which he, in turn, received from them.

Cabled news from Paris says that city, accustomed as it is to unusual revelations, is astounded at the life, revealed by these tender missives as have been led by Count Boni. If Paris is astounded, New York friends of Anna Gould are ten-fold more so.

Listened with Flushed Face.

The sensational features in the trial which have preceded are forgotten in the publication of letters written by Castellane to many women, in which he has breathed his love for them, and in letters which he received from his numerous women admirers.

In tones of deepest loathing Maitre Crappi read some of these letters yesterday. With her face flushed, the former Anna Gould listened to the description of her husband's faithlessness to her and to her children.

"I borrow Little Boni mine—I cannot let Christmas pass without sending wishes that God may grant all your desires and keep you in that health which makes all joy for I know you are so much occupied with pretty women that I cannot enjoy alone your sweet companionship. But you will never have a truer friend. Love, love, love.

"LUCIE DE LEMNOS."

My Only "Some One."

"What joy to be in our little home in Paris again, to pass sweet, exquisite moments together. My one desire is to reorder these happy. I wish thee to be my only 'Some One,' and then are willing to be. But tell me thou art happy; tell me that all my doubts are but a horrid nightmare. Thou art my only friend. Write me, my dear friend, to console me; I burn thy letters quickly. I love thee. I love thee.

"The above was written to the Count by a woman bearing one of the most historic names in France.

Another letter which Maitre Crappi read during his scathing arraignment of the Count was from an unknown lady to the woman of high position in society:

"Bonni—You must write to her, she is so weary, so ill without you. At least send a telegram to ease her from despair."

"Thy Letter a Kiss."

Soon came this letter to the nobleman who has spent $8,000,000 of his wife's money: who "allowed" her but a month pin money, for which she had to sue as a favor:

"How grateful I am for thy blessed, blessed telegram. My happiness at this moment compensates me for the anguish of these two awful days of silence. I embrace thee tenderly.

Another married woman, in the highest society rote:

"Thy letter was a kiss, a caress. I am well again. What a hideous thought it was that haunted me that thou were sick and away from me and I could not help or soothe thee. Thou art my own self. Take my most tender kisses. I embrace thee with all the tenderness of my soul."

Struck Wife in the Face.

One day, only a few months after her marriage, eleven years ago, the Countess approached her husband, who was writing. Leaning affectionately on his shoulder, she glanced down at his letter. She read:

"Thou dear one lacking to my happiness."

Realizing that she had seen the concluding words of his love letter, the Count sprang to his feet and, in a towering rage, struck his wife in the face. Nor was his anger checked by my dignity shame because of a servant's presence.

STABBED DEAD AT NORTH END

Michael Machuccio, aged twenty-six, was fatally stabbed during a game of "morra" yesterday in the kitchen of a tenement on the second floor of the house at No. 17 Cleveland place, North End. The police are looking for Nicola Leona, a bootblack on the B., R. B. & L. ferry, who, those present say, quarreled with Machuccio, and who ran from the house immediately after the stabbing. Leona is twenty-two years old, about 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds, and is smooth faced and dark complexioned.

STOLE 9 COATS, RAN, ARRESTED

With five ladies' coats, three men's overcoats, one under coat and one pair of trousers hanging from his arms, Michael Coleman gave the officers of Division 12 a chase of eight blocks early today, after he had broken into the tailor shop of Ella Kraus at No. 209 K street, South Boston, breaking the glass in the front door with his fist. As he was leaving the shop officers saw him and gave chase.

The coats hindered Coleman so that he was caught and the stolen property recovered.

SEEK CARNEY HOSPITAL FUND AT FESTIVAL

Institution Now in Arrears Appeals for Support of Attraction Thursday.

23 PARISHES ARE TO HELP

Carney Hospital is $11,000 in arrears for food, drugs, coal and other supplies that have been used in caring for the sick poor. Every day the pain of election time the statement is well calculated to make the friends of the Sisters of Charity and their splendid institution in South Boston stop, think and decide to attend Thursday's annual festival in Mechanics Hall.

Each of the twenty-three Roman Catholic parishes of Boston will be represented by a handsomely decorated table, and there will be subscription galore. Talented players and performers come from the best theatres in town, Alphonsus and everything there will be dancing, and at 8:30 o'clock Mayor Fitzgerald is to say a few words.

The committees express themselves as well satisfied that the festival will be the best and happiest on record. They set out to give every ticket buyer value received for his money, so that, while his mite helps along a most worthy cause, he will have real entertainment of the best sort in return. The inside will be a feature and the Dances of the Children, under Miss Rose Isabell Byrne, a delight.

Carney Hospital, famous throughout New England, is forty-two years old. Annually it cares for 3,000 charity patients and about 35,000 in the out-put out department. They cannot longer carry sect Boston moves City and State give the hospital no material support, and the past year there have been no bequests of note.

MANUFACTURER BROKE LABOR LAW; FINED $50

Pleaded Guilty to Employing Girls Under 16 Years Old After 6 P. M.

WORCESTER, Nov. 5.—Prescott Greenwood, proprietor of the Bay State Shipping Company, was fined $50 by Judge Samuel Utley today for violation of the labor law. There were five complaints against the defendant, and he pleaded guilty to all. Girls under sixteen years of age were found working in his factory after 6 o'clock by State Inspector Charles Dinn.

FEAR FOR KINEO, 191 DAYS OUT

Fear is felt for the safety of the five-masted steel schooner Kineo, of Bath, Me., which left the Hawaiian Islands with 4,000 tons of sugar for Philadelphia 191 days ago. Another vessel that left later has long reached port, but report having neither seen nor heard anything of the overdue Kineo.

39 HORSES CREMATED.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 5.—Thirty-nine horses were cremated in a $60,000 livery stable fire here last night and a woman and two children were severely dead from suffocation when rescued.

Rhode Island State vs. Trinity at Hartford.
Worcester Academy vs. Worcester College at Middlebury, Vt.
Lehigh vs. Princeton at Princeton.
Georgetown vs. University of Virginia at Washington.

There were games and the Harvard football schedule will have been played next Saturday. Whether the Crimson of Harvard remains on the surface or sinks will be decided on Saturday, when the Carlisle Indians will be here for their annual game. The Indians are easily the fastest team that has visited Cambridge this year, some think the fastest on the gridiron. A team that is good enough to pile up 78 points on Pennsylvania, as this did, however, is good enough to be disappointed with itself if it doesn't do great things in the Stadium.

After last week's game with Dartmouth Brown, the followers of football are looking forward to the coming clash with much anxiety. Brown was fast and full of tricks, and the Crimson players were unable to meet with an attack with much success. The Indians have three points of the new football developed even to a better stage of perfection than had the team from Providence, and unless Harvard takes a big brace it would be no great surprise to see the redskins walk away with the honors and realize the ambition of their football career.

There will be some big numbers interesting to the game this week, men who have been on the hospital list. Captain Forbes will be ready to go into the scrimmage and, while will come to-morrow afternoon. Applebie is coming along nicely, and should be ready to play by Saturday. When he gets back into the game the backfield will be greatly strengthened, for Weld can then be shifted to right halfback, making the combination it was when he was fighting for the honors. Lincoln will not come around in time to get into the Indian game.

"Long Shot's" String Good Money Getters

COX'S HORSES LED ALL

Again the year as in the last few seasons the largest money winner was New England trainer and driver is "Long Shot" Cox of Manchester, N. H., with a total of $20,616.66 to his credit.

This sum would have been larger except for the accident to Cox in Cincinnati when he dislocated his shoulder, which caused his retirement for the season, as it was his idea to go right along after Lexington into Atlanta, Texas and the South for a number of weeks longer.

Last week all of the horses were sent into Winter quarters in Manchester. Seventeen came from Lexington, three from Albany, N. Y., and thirteen from the Detroit, Mich., track where the string was trained last Spring.

The stable has been split up almost the entire season with Lexington, New England State, and the Grand Circuit, in place of around the old stamping ground of Rockingham, Dover and the half mile tracks in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

The stable participated in 132 races, winning twenty-nine heats, twenty-three and one-third seconds, nineteen and one-third thirds, twenty-six and five-sixths fourths and was thirty-three times unplaced. Argot Boy, 2:03¾, is the fastest five-year-old pacer of the year, won the most in purses, $6,202, in seven races, while of the trotters Grancino, 2:13, headed the list with $1,090, made in seven starts.

WILL TRY TO OUST PULLIAM FROM SEAT

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—There will be considerable doing at the meeting of the National League, which has been called for Tuesday, December 11, in this city. The friends of President Pulliam have been watching for some time with a good deal of interest and a little anxiety the efforts of the New York Club and its friends to oust him from the presidency. The leaders in the movement are John T. Brush and Garry Herrmann. It is said, and they are reported to have been at work some time laying pipes for Pulliam's downfall.

In the case of the New York Club the cause of objection to Pulliam is based on his disciplining the Giants last season and his upholding Umpire Johnstone when the latter official was refused admission to the Polo Grounds.

Pulliam asserts that six clubs, Pittsburg, Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Brooklyn and Philadelphia, will vote to sustain him and he cannot be beaten.

Ban Johnson proposes to put a stop to the practice of professional baseball city league games making inroads on the protected teams and bring players who refuse to play with the team to which they have been signed.

"National agreement clubs must be protected from the inroads of outside professional clubs," said President Johnson today. "And I am sure that rules along these lines will be promulgated before the season opens next year. The major league wants to encourage amateur teams and players in every way possible, but they must also protect themselves when the so-called semi-professionals overstep reasonable bounds."

At the meeting of the baseball rules committee a change will be made in the present foul strike rule, which will differentiate between the deliberate and intentional or the puny little fouls that fall close to either side of fair territory. One strike has been made by a chalk-marked territory within which foul balls are simply fouls.

Pitcher Tom Hughes, who was suspended by Umpire Manager Stahl of the Washington club near the end of the season, on the charge of being too friendly with the umpire that closely will be one of the National League's strongholds in the best next season, if the Managed Cantillon is able to have him reinstated.

LONG ECONOMY TEST FOR MOTORS STARTS NOV. 14

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Attorney-General W. H. Moody is partly fond of the kind of chicken dinner which they serve at Fernecroft. When he he visits Boston or his native city he usually manages to take a day or two run to the little cottage on the bill between Dedham and Middleboro, and one, away from dull business cares and worries, the affairs of the State and nation, he reduced himself to his heart's content. He, together with his close friend, Postmaster Pinkham of Haverhill, formed two of the pleasant party which gathered at the yesterday afternoon. They seemed unmindful of the gubernatorial contests in this and surrounding States, and devoted their time to discussing broiled chicken and talking politics. This is the third time this season that the Attorney-General has visited Fernecroft, which is the place where stories most do congregate.

In the second annual open economy test for motor cars conducted by the Automobile Club, the itinerary will be as follows: Wednesday, November 14, New York to Albany. Thursday, November 15, Albany to Springfield. Friday, November 16, Springfield to New York. In order to test different classes, the autos will be divided into classes, and the awards will be made on the basis of one per ton mile. The basis of the test per ton mile will be as follows: The total weight of car, passengers, baggage, extra parts and equipment to be used and practising, is multiplied by the miles travelled, giving what is known as the ton mile. The final cost or outgoes against each car when divided by the ton miles travelled gives the average cost per ton mile. Total cost will include gasoline, oil, tires, chains, spare parts, tires, hose, bolts and storage.

The contest is expected to be one of the most interesting ever held in this country. Entries of it will close November 10.

Gradually it has become conceded that the automobile is a good roads proposition and unfitted for track racing, yet old timers who were present at the Empire track opening the old Jerome Park track in New York this year were run on October 27, admitted that there was enough interest to warrant a belief that there will be a renaissance of this form of sport. The first event was interesting, although a fifty-mile event would have been more to the liking of the fans. It was won by W. G. Brokaw's Mercedes, was put out of the running by tire trouble, as was the only racing machine, Ernest Keeler's Pope-Toledo, which had been leading for a time, although the average of forty-nine miles on a track, made by Koehler, the winner, was creditable. The interest centered upon was that for the long race of 200 miles, which was won by Lancia by a few seconds, the other makers who are in the second group.

With certain types of foot feed carburetors out of track in the first afternoon with the inclination of the throttle the most noticeable in the case of the pattern which plays host to the seventy-horse power Mercedes and in the mild line of the throttle the immediate result is, of course, that when speeding grades greater suction is required to lift the same amount of fuel that is used on the level, and except in the case of an exceptionally well designed carburetta a starved mixture is apt to result. Depending on this account in a large extent many cars prove to be extremely sensitive to grades, large or small, and, of course, heightened where the foot is drawn upon for gravity alone. In the case of the hilly, the choking and sputtering which causes so much trouble and delay on descending grades may be due to a mixture inferior to that required by the Princeton.

The brains of Yale football have been vigorously at work on the new plays, and the secret which moves Princeton in two weeks will show the most puzzling set of tricks any wearing a Yale uniform ever displayed.

Taking up the positions on the team one by one, the coaches decided to retain both Forbes at left end. There was talk of putting him back at tackle and of giving left end to Howard Jones, and also of putting him at fullback and giving end to Captain Morse, but the coaches were nearly unanimous for leaving him at left end.

Paine has made good at left tackle, to the minds of the coaches. He has solved the mysteries of the change from guard quickly, and although he will not rank as an All-American tackle, like Forbes and Bigelow, he seems sure to fill the bill. There is almost no chance that he will be deposed and Forbes sent back to tackle.

Brides Has Made Good.

Brides has clinched his hold on left guard. It is a novelty for a fullback to be moved to guard and to hold the place, but Brides has been helped by an odd event. He has jumped up in weight from 182 to 190 pounds unexpectedly. His added weight was the strongest argument against keeping him at guard, but he began to grow heavy when it seemed as if he was too light, and his quickness and agility settled the campaign in his favor. He has blocked more kicks this Fall than any Yale guard since Ralph Bloomer's best year.

Heckenburger has been finally picked for centre. He has been at guard most of the season, but when Rockinck, the former centre, arrived last Wednesday he looked the field over and selected Heckenburger as the most promising of the lot around. Carl Flinn'ben, last year's centre, is out of the running, and although Gillis, who was centre till two weeks ago, is playing nearly all the time, the second team he and Dutch Levine will have to fight it out between them for the centre and guard first substitute positions.

Archer Erwin was out of the game a week, but is back at right guard, and is a strenuous thing ever, and will hold the place he played last year. Higley has not been quite up to his brilliant last year's standard at right tackle, but he is undoubtedly one of the most valuable members of the team. He has not been used in the games to carry the ball any, but the coaches will surprise the public if they do not work up some lively plays which pivot around Higley.

Alcott at Right End.

Clarence Alcott has right end in his grasp. He has been worked lightly for a week because of the overwork the coaches had to give him to teach him all about the new game, but he is now looked upon as the equal of any Yale end of recent years except Sheviln.

Tad Jones is merely the greatest quarterback in whirlwind form, although he was off his game a little while Knox is in the best form as dodging halfback at left halfback. Quarterback Coy is the first substitute quarterback to right halfback to succeed Captain Morse who, in turn, has been shifted from his old place at right halfback to succeed Coy playing the signal Roome. The loss of Roome has cost the team dearly, as he was one of the best men He is still in the sanitarium, and there is no prospect of his getting back in time to make shape for the Princeton game. Indications are that he will be out the entire season, he will be in far from his last year's form. He has looked more like his Fall than any Yale guard since Ralph Bloomer's best year.

Heckenburger has been finally picked for centre. He has been at guard most of the season, but when Rockinck, the former centre, arrived last Wednesday he looked the field over and selected Heckenburger as the most promising of the lot around. FIGHTING DICK CULLEN.

Kaufman and Berger Have Sworn Off Fighting Jawn

O'BRIEN STILL ON LOOKOUT

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—Jack O'Brien sat at the Berger-Kaufman ringside and thought and thought and thought.

That the Philadelphian's matter was in an unusual state of confusion was suggested by his washboard forehead. Jack's alabaster brow was corrugated to such an extent that it would have used a lot of nothing gratis.

"Lose to Berger Jack?" asked a sport when the fight was over and O'Brien's face resembled a thunderstorm in embryo.

"Naw, I am thinking what a goat I was to break into a match with Berger because he wanted straight rules and a free arm fighter. I could have licked Johnson or anyone barm at close quarters."

Much was implied in this view of the situation by the manner in which Kaufman took over Berger in the ring to treat work. This was Kaufman's one particular specialty. When both men were fired and Berger is a spirit of self preservation tried to grapple Kaufman's left thumb's arm, for a second purpose. He has down Berger's hold and guard and gave a fast from upper cut, a grapevine chop and sending his right fist with a jarring clog to a point behind Berger's ear.

It was a tantalizing punch and the only time Berger looked in real pain when he landed his elbow across Kaufman's shoulder in clinches.

"It was no use," said Sam, in his next day, "trying their fellow has in his forearms is something fierce. He pulled my arm down so that my left was out of range. Berger is a scrapper, a good one, but he's not in it with me like a Hamburg steak."

Jack O'Brien, who would not sign on the "protect yourself" basis with Berger, fearing that the surly Sun Francisco would rough handle him as a grizzly bear would a mouse, is not idle and has a grand mistake.

After the defeats O'Brien visited both fighters in their dressing rooms. It was a case of condolence for Berger and congratulation for Kaufman.

"Al, you put up a clever fight," said Jack.

"Yes," put in Billy Delany, "he whipped Berger the way I planned for him to beat you. He took a punching and then wore his man down. The only thing in your case was that you were getting stronger ending."

"Do you think the knowledge you have gained would be of any use in future affairs?" said O'Brien, who thought he felt a nibble.

"Possibly," said Delany, "but in the meantime Al is going to cut out boxing and look for a job at a real man's work."

That was the nearest O'Brien and Kaufman came to talking fight.

They say Jimmy Britt was comforter-in-chief in Berger's dressing room after the fight.

"Cheer up," said Jimmy, "you made a brave showing and you'll find yourself popular in Europe. You boys have gotten the greatest fighters flying ardor everyone occasionally. Why, man, I've been beaten myself."

A smile dawned across Sam's swollen face and, if report speaks truly, Jimmy wondered what his old pal was amused at.

If Jack O'Brien keeps his word and remains away from the ring for a year it will mean that both Berger and Kaufman will be out of the game for that length of time. Berger says he hasn't quite made up his mind yet whether he will ever sign for another match, and that in any case he would not think of hooking up with anyone before having it out with Kaufman.

"It may sound ambiguous," said Sam, "but if I can't lick Kaufman, it isn't any use of me keeping along at the game. Mind you, I'm not saying that I am eager to box him again. I am worrying over the way my stamina deserted me the other night and I am bent on finding out what is wrong. If it is that there is some weak spot in my physical makeup, I want to know about it and will consult a doctor when I get around to it."

* * *

With Berger and Kaufman in temporary retirement and with Jack O'Brien and Tommy Burns matched in Los Angeles, it is very evident that the November contest in San Francisco will not be between heavyweights. Under the circumstances the Pacific coast trust is inclined to arrange a bout between Joe Thomas and the best available heavyweight. Morris Levy, who is the matchmaker for this month, has been instructed to proceed along the lines mentioned.

Jimmy Britt, who has trained steadily in the expectation of being called upon to box in December, is puzzled because Hat Nelson steadfastly refuses to talk fight.

"Can't understand the Dane's tactics," said Britt. "If he gives any study to public demand to the boxing line he must see that a Britt-Nelson go would be a big money maker right now. Anyhow, he still has a week or two to think it over, but if he doesn't display signs of life before that time, I'll have to turn my attention to somebody else. I'm not going to fight again before the year closes, and pretty soon it will be a case of first come first served."

It is believed that Bill Squires, the Australian champion, will be seen cooling ashore with his luggage before many weeks have passed. Squires has about cleaned up the heavyweight situation in Australia, and as the Americans will not go to him he must come to them. Moreover, it is the intention of Squires to present a few exhibitions of boxing is about to become one more, so that it will be necessary for Squires to go abroad.

Squires, who will scale weigh more than 170 pounds, is a rushing fighter, and according to Australian sporting men who have passed through the United States Squires is qualified to give conclusions with any of the big fellows at present operating in this country. He will meet Mike Williams, a South African heavyweight, a few days from now, and if he is successful there is no reason to suppose that he will visit America on fighting bent.

Mike Williams, Squires's next opponent, is quite a character. He is of Irish born and has all the wit of his race. He is a bit of a ring lawyer, and one occasion defeated a fight while he argued a point with the referee.

"You're not to hit in the clinches," said the referee when warning the men.

"Say, do you know that it takes two to make a clinch?" asked Mike.

"What of it?" said the referee.

"Only that if one man is hitting there can be no clinch."

The referee failed to agree with Mike and after a few rounds the Irish-Africa was disqualified.

CULLEN-MURPHY BOUT WILL BE A WARM ONE

Local fight fans are in for a good treat to-morrow night when Dick Cullen, one of the best boxers in the game who ever wore a glove, and Tommy Murphy, the Harlem slasher, get in the ring at Chelsea to battle for six rounds at a finish bout.

The lilt that Murphy made here on his appearance with Kid Goodman is assurance that few will miss this meeting, as Murphy is an attraction in any bout in this country, as is strictly a fighter in every sense of the word. His speedy work and slugging wallops left their effect on Goodman and he is the strongest article in the line that has ever engaged pugilists in the Hub. He doesn't know what it is to stall and his incessant style of battling is pleasing to the observers who like a rattling bout where there is nothing but action.

Murphy knows in right experts agree that he can lick them all at his weight and it is evident that he must be in perfect condition or his manager, Billy Oliver, would not let him step into such a tough match as is on the card for him to-morrow night. Further proof Murphy must have been going like a whirlwind is the fact that he has agreed to go on with Cullen at 133 pounds which is difficult for him to do and he generally demands. Murphy is every bit a fighter and when he comes to the front that Matty Baldwin, who was scheduled to face him, had defaulted and he was glad to meet Cullen he never qualified but accepted the situation with the same grin and never yet knowing that he had a bigger job on his hands. Cullen is one of the best good with the Hub fans after his forced disappearance of a few months ago.

Dick Cullen, like Murphy, is one of the gamest and most aggressive fighters in the business. The description of all his battles in Australia, where he was for a year, go to prove it. He met the best there was to be had in Australia and South Africa, and came off with flying colors and he now back here impatient to get the same distinction here in his own country. Cullen has had considerable experience in foreign lands the shorter distance bouts have will not be anything like a novelty to him. Then he fought with practically skin and bone on his hands as he was laid up with He has the punch and once he gets it on there is little to it as to the decision which is bound to follow.

Cullen is strong on his feet, being no novice in handling himself in the ring having graduated from the amateur ranks to show for his windings there three cups, one of which a bunch of friends had chipped in for. Although there is considerable speculation as to how Murphy will stand the weight Cullen on his trip around the world and the youngster from Lynn has benefited from the hard experience of meeting all comers.

Cullen would readily make 130 pounds for Murphy if he had more time and the weather was right, but training in cold weather is not conducive for taking off of flesh and he refused to take chances of weakening by going on that mark.

His recent decisive victory over Hock Lewis in five rounds is conclusive evidence that he can punch, when Keyes was over-matched against Lavarry in twenty rounds.

This victory of Cullen scared Charley Neary and Terrence Thompson to the extent that they flunked in matches with him.

B. A. A. Amateur Bouts.

The B. A. A. will hold its first amateur tournament of the season this week. The first bout will be held Wednesday night and the finals Saturday night.

The contest between O'Connor and Kelley in Philadelphia Saturday night will be an interesting one. They met in a 20-round contest some months ago, and though no decision was rendered it was conceded that O'Toole did the better work.

SCHOOL TEAMS APPROACH END OF SCHEDULES

There are but few games left on the interscholastic football schedule as most these dates many of the teams have a problem to solve.

Boston Latin, one of the strongest, if not the strongest, of the high school teams around the Hub, will suffer the most from conditions as the five boys declared ineligible, and the task of filling these vacancies will not be an easy matter. Coach Dr. Maguire has worked wonders with the squad this season, but he will have to hustle and find new material.

English High has not been called upon to give up any of the regular line men Fleetson has been declared eligible, and will play in the coming contests.

The next game which will tax English High's ability will be the contest with Mechanic Arts, Saturday.

South Boston has had all its men declared eligible, and some of the players are openly boasting they are better than their elevens.

Dorchester will feel the loss of Jackson at end, although the substitute who played in that position—Lambert—could not be improved upon very much. Beal, a guard, and Dolan, quarterback, are the other two men who will be out of the game, and some of the Dorchester rooters are inclined to think that this fills their cup of misery to overflowing.

The conditioning of young Stankard of Witham is a matter of much interest, and if it is to be hoped that he will be able to work off the conditions before the end of the season.

Gridiron Material So Weak at New Haven That

YALE WILL DEPEND UPON TRICKS

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 5.—After the most remarkable conference ever held by Yale football coaches the make-up of the varsity team is settled, two weeks before the Princeton and Harvard games. A total of eighteen former players were haled here by Captain Sammy Morse, comprising prodently all last week, and every position was discussed and its occupant dissected.

The coaches figure that they will have no trouble in winning the Brown game here next Saturday without showing their hand as regards the new plays, and aside from what plays had to be worked to-day, Yale expected to show nothing till the Princeton game two weeks hence. Against Brown, the coaches think, will prove easier to wollop than Amherst was.

Many New Plays.

The secret practice of the past week resulted in the demonstration of more novel formations than have been used on the gridiron since the year of the famous flying wedge. The Yale coaches think that if their team wins this year it will be because of effective plays and not superior players, for the material here is considered inferior by no team around Princeton.

The brains of Yale football have been vigorously at work on the new plays, and the secret which moves Princeton in two weeks will show the most puzzling set of tricks any wearing a Yale uniform ever displayed.

Taking up the positions on the team one by one, the coaches decided to retain both Forbes at left end. There was talk of putting him back at tackle and of giving left end to Howard Jones, and also of putting him at fullback and giving end to Captain Morse, but the coaches were nearly unanimous for leaving him at left end.

Paine has made good at left tackle, to the minds of the coaches. He has solved the mysteries of the change from guard quickly, and although he will not rank as an All-American tackle, like Forbes and Bigelow, he seems sure to fill the bill. There is almost no chance that he will be deposed and Forbes sent back to tackle.

Brides Has Made Good.

Brides has clinched his hold on left guard. It is a novelty for a fullback to be moved to guard and to hold the place, but Brides has been helped by an odd event. He has jumped up in weight from 182 to 190 pounds unexpectedly. His added weight was the strongest argument against keeping him at guard, but he began to grow heavy when it seemed as if he was too light, and his quickness and agility settled the campaign in his favor. He has blocked more kicks this Fall than any Yale guard since Ralph Bloomer's best year.

Heckenburger has been finally picked for centre. He has been at guard most of the season, but when Rockinck, the former centre, arrived last Wednesday he looked the field over and selected Heckenburger as the most promising of the lot around. Carl Flinn'ben, last year's centre, is out of the running, and although Gillis, who was centre till two weeks ago, is playing nearly all the time, the second team he and Dutch Levine will have to fight it out between them for the centre and guard first substitute positions.

Archer Erwin was out of the game a week, but is back at right guard, and is a strenuous thing ever, and will hold the place he played last year. Higley has not been quite up to his brilliant last year's standard at right tackle, but he is undoubtedly one of the most valuable members of the team. He has not been used in the games to carry the ball any, but the coaches will surprise the public if they do not work up some lively plays which pivot around Higley.

Alcott at Right End.

Clarence Alcott has right end in his grasp. He has been worked lightly for a week because of the overwork the coaches had to give him to teach him all about the new game, but he is now looked upon as the equal of any Yale end of recent years except Sheviln.

Tad Jones is merely the greatest quarterback in whirlwind form, although he was off his game a little while Knox is in the best form as dodging halfback at left halfback. Quarterback Coy is the first substitute quarterback to right halfback to succeed Captain Morse who, in turn, has been shifted from his old place at right halfback to succeed Coy playing the signal Roome. The loss of Roome has cost the team dearly, as he was one of the best men He is still in the sanitarium, and there is no prospect of his getting back in time to make shape for the Princeton game. Indications are that he will be out the entire season, he will be in far from his last year's form. He has looked more like his Fall than any Yale guard since Ralph Bloomer's best year.

Heckenburger has been finally picked for centre. He has been at guard most of the season, but when Rockinck, the former centre, arrived last Wednesday he looked the field over and selected Heckenburger as the most promising of the lot around. Carl Flinn'ben, last year's centre, is out of the running, and although Gillis, who was centre till two weeks ago, is playing nearly all the time, the second team he and Dutch Levine will have to fight it out between them for the centre and guard first substitute positions.

He has not been used in the games to carry the ball any, but the coaches will surprise the public if they do not work up some lively plays which pivot around Higley.

Boston American Daily Home Magazine

Miss Fairfax Talks to Wives and Mothers

YOUR meat bill is larger than it was a year ago, isn't it?

That's because the Beef Trust has turned the screw a little bit tighter and sent up the price of meat.

Get out your bills for the past year, look them over and see if meat has not steadily risen in price.

If it were not for the extortionate prices kept up by the trusts you would not have to worry so much about the children's Winter clothes; you would not feel so badly at seeing the first hole appear in the shoes and stockings.

* * *

Perhaps you have daughters who are growing into young women. They would like a pretty parlor to receive their friends in, and they ought to have it. But who can think of luxuries when the bare necessities cost so much?

Mothers are the most unselfish of human beings, and so, of course, you do not crave anything for yourself; but doesn't your heart long to see your pretty girl decked out in some of the dainty forbelows that would be so becoming to her?

But all the money must go to the support of the trusts.

Dear me, how we must love the trusts to give so generously and eagerly as we do!

It is equal to saying, "Dear trusts, take more; we are not giving you half enough."

And they will take it, all right; have no fear on that score.

* * *

Next year the prices will go a little higher, and so on year after year. How the trusts must laugh at us—how "easy" they must think us!

Are you going to keep on giving the trusts the money you ought to be saving or spending on your home and children?

Do you want to work, work, work all your life, growing old and tired long before your time?

Do you never think how nice it would be if in the evening of your life you and your husband could take a well-earned rest?

How happy you would be in a little home of your own, where your children and grandchildren could visit you!

But you never can have that if you keep on in your blind support of the trusts.

The money that might buy that little heaven of peace for your declining years is devoted to enriching the trusts.

If you can persuade your husband to vote against the trusts and Guild and Draper you will be laying the cornerstone of your future prosperity.

* * *

Tell your husband how you feel in the matter; beg him to vote for the man who can and will do so much for your happiness.

You have to-day left in which to work for votes. You must not neglect this chance to free yourself from the oppression of the trusts.

Think of what it means to your children. Take heart and work your level best to defeat the men who take their orders from the trusts.

Dorothy Dix Advises the Husband Who Would Be Happy to Use a Judicious Amount of "Jolly" With His Wife

Ten Commandments for Married Men

BY DOROTHY DIX

THE fifth commandment of the married man is this:

Thou shalt put honey on thy tongue, for the jolly is mightier than the hammer.

Before a man marries a woman it is discretionary with him whether he flatters her or not. After marriage it is a matter of necessity.

The one rule for getting along with a woman in peace and comfort and for keeping her happy and satisfied with her lot, no matter what it may be, is for her husband to jolly her along.

It is a recipe so unfailing, so simple, and so cheap that the wonder is so few men practice it.

"The proof of the pudding," says the old adage, "is in the eating," and any theory about the best way of making marriage a success, instead of a failure, must be tested by actual experience.

Look about you and see who are the happiest wives. Which, of all the married women of your acquaintance, are most devoted to their husbands, the most sure that they have drawn capital prizes in the matrimonial lottery?

Are they the women who are married to rich men—the women who have automobiles and fine houses and servants and Paris clothes and everything that money can buy? No.

You cannot cash a check at the Bank of Domestic Happiness that has no endorsement on it save that of Croesus.

Unhappy Wives

ARE the women who are married to good men—the sort of men who are spoken of as models in the community—invariably happy wives?

Not at all.

Some of the saddest faced women you know are women whose husbands are preachers, and reformers, and church leaders.

But the happy women, the women who openly rejoice in being married, the women who are always urging girls to marry, whose every voice soften and take on every cadence of love when they speak of their husbands, what kind of men are they married to?

To men who flatter them, every time. To men who tell them that they are young, and beautiful, and fascinating, and good housekeepers, and financiers, and cooks, and companions, and that they are the only women in the world for them.

Half the time these men can give their wives precious little else besides appreciation and tender speeches, and it is to the everlasting honor of women that as long as a woman's husband does give her that she doesn't care a fig for the balance.

She may have to live in a crowded flat, but if her husband tells her that she is the queen of that, she would rather reign in it than to be the lonely and deserted mistress of a Fifth avenue mansion.

Women Like Words

SHE may have to wear her last year's hat and her Summer before last gown, but as long as her husband tells her that she is still the most beautiful woman in the world in his on any subject, but she can be lulled eyes, she will shed no tears for lack of new gowns.

This is the reason that women who flatter their husbands, as the slang phrase goes, are generally happier than those who marry above themselves. The man who looks up to his wife burns incense at her feet, and as long as this lasts she is supremely happy.

And asks nothing else.

A man feels the mere fact that he spends his life toiling for his wife is sufficient proof of his devotion to her, and that he deliberately chose her from among all other women is an infallible indication that he admires her more than any other member of her sex.

The Honeyed Tongue

THERE is just one way to manage a woman, and that is by praising her. You can coax her anywhere, but you cannot drive her an inch.

All the fussing, the scolding, the reasoning, the commanding of which a man is capable will not swerve a hair's breadth from the course she has taken with pitiful tears and pouts.

"Put Honey on Thy Tongue, Oh, Brother, When Thou Speakest to Thy Wife, and Great Shall Be Thy Reward."

away from it in a minute.

She may not be amenable to logic, but she is conscious to her finger tips that if she does one way, she will fare with the approbation of the man she loves, and if she does the other, with his blame.

When a man is married the wisest thing for him to do is to throw away the hammer, and install the salve jar in the place of honor on the shelf that holds his lares and penates.

Let him not hold his hands in using the emolument, for thereby shall he make his household rich smoothly.

Let him not knock his wife's faults, but praise her virtues, and before he knows it her good qualities will have choked out the bad.

A fool lambasts his wife for her ill-served meals, with the result that she resorts that she doesn't know how to cook, and she doesn't like to cook, and she don't marry to be made a cook, and great shall be thy reward.

and he has to eat soggy bread and burnt steak to the end of his days.

The sensible man tells his wife that she is the dearest, darlingest, cleverest little housekeeper in the world, and that no woman could perish among the pots rather than not come up to what her husband expects, and he feasts and jolly as long as he lives.

Put honey on thy tongue, oh, brother, when thou speakest to thy wife, and great shall be thy reward.

THINGS A BRIDE OUGHT TO KNOW

THAT "no credit" is a very safe motto for a young couple to live up to.

That necessities should be selected before fancy articles.

That it is always decidedly cheaper in the end to buy good carpets and good furniture.

That a small sum should be put aside regularly with which a home may be purchased.

That it is not wise to provide too many pots, kettles and pans when furnishing a kitchen.

That all bills for marketing should be paid weekly—and, better still, when the article is bought.

That good cooking and a tidy home, combined with a sweet temper, go far toward persuading a husband that marriage is not a failure.

THE HOUSE OF DOOM

A Romance of Love and Mystery

By GEORGE BARRY BRONSON

CHAPTER XII.—Continued

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

JUST a few doors I was in front of the house number of John Parham's card and found it to be a substantial residence, with wide porches and a closely trimmed lawn, giving indications that Parham was at least comfortably fixed with this world's goods.

As I glanced in I saw that the pink-shaded electric lights in the drawing room were alight and at the piano was sitting a woman dressed in black. A servant in a French cap was letting down the Venetian blinds, and as I watched a moment I saw that her woman had stopped playing and had turned to speak to the maid.

A Strange Sight

At the same instant the figure of a man stole across the room—a tall, shadowy figure—and came up behind the woman, causing her to start from her seat, while the servant left the room. Then the Venetian blinds were closed, and I could see only the artistic interior was suddenly shut out from my view.

One thing caused me to remain there in wonder. Parham my eyes had deceived me, but I could not help thinking that when that vague figure crossed the room the woman started up with a look of terror. From where I stood I could not see distinctly, yet I felt certain that the person who had entered was unwelcome and unbidden.

The other blinds had already been lowered, for it was now nearly dark, and above the wide porch a light shone over the door. I began to figure how I could learn something concerning this John Parham who lived amid such comfortable surroundings, and, spying a servant watering a flowering bush, I asked him if he knew Mr. Parham.

"Oh, yes, sir," replied the gardman, "and he's a very nice gentleman, too."

"Married?"

"Yes, sir; but they have no children. They keep an automobile and I believe he's pretty well fixed."

"Now I want to know something more particular about him," I suggested, slipping a half dollar into the man's hand, "so you happen to know any one that could tell me?"

He looked suspiciously a moment at me, though he pocketed the coin.

"You ain't a detective, are you?" he demanded. "Because I don't want to get into no trouble and have to go to court."

"No, no," I said, laughing, "it's merely curiosity over—well, over a little matter of business. I'm a business man—not a policeman."

"Well," he said at length, "there's Harry Larkin down a few blocks, that keeps a little stationer's store; his sister is cook for Mr. Parham's, and probably he might put you in the way of finding out something, if it's done quiet."

Acting upon his suggestion and following his directions, I walked down to the little school and newspaper shop and found Laking behind the counter. After I had bought a cigar, ostensibly explaining my mission and ostentatiously tucked a folded dollar bill under a corner of the cigar lighter, cautious Harry opened up and told me what he knew of his sister's employers.

An Unhappy Couple

"Mr. Parham is a wholesale jeweller," he said, "and he goes often to buy jewels and such. Sometimes he even goes to Europe for months at a time, leaving his young wife alone. She is very young, and Annie tells me she leads a very lonely life. They're wealthy, but there's an unhappy couple—that's my opinion. Yet they know all the best people on the East Side, and Mr. Parham gives big dinners and receptions every little while.

"She's unhappy, you say," I ventured, recollecting the curious scene I had witnessed at the instant of lowering the blinds.

"Yes, Annie has overheard their quarrels. The master, she says, has such a hold over the mistress that she dare not call her soul her own. There was a scene between them about three weeks ago. They quarrelled at the dinner table, and Mrs. Parham left the room, went upstairs, wrote a letter and tried to commit suicide by drinking some acid.

"Her maid got hold of the letter, and then surveyed in dog her mistress' steps for fortunately the solution wasn't strong enough. But it made her very ill, and she was in bed a week, while her husband kept himself off and never inquired after her. She sent for him at last, but little Mrs. Parham, and say that her husband's a brute at heart. There was another terrible row once, when her brother called and overheard Mr. Parham threatening her in the next room. They say that the two men came to blows, and that he gave Parham a thorough good hiding, which he richly deserved. It's a queer household, and the man to be trifled with, they say, for Parham had in fact planned for his life. Afterwards he beaten dog vowed vengeance, and the poor wife had a terrible time of it."

"A rather unhappy household," I remarked.

"Very. Annie tells me a lot. She wouldn't stay there—nor would any of the servants—if the wages are so good."

Reticent, But Knowing

I saw that the man knew more than he cared to divulge. He was no friend of Parham's, and was certainly on the side of the ill used wife.

"Is Parham young or old?"

"Not very old—fifty, fatrish, rather bald, with a round face and a long nose. Mrs. Parham is quite young, about twenty-six, and people call her good-lookin', but my style is to judge of women. I'm not stuck on 'em, and she's the best-lookin' of 'em all in my book. Parham's a dresser—dresses awful smartly, and drives in a fine carriage."

"You don't like Parham," I said. "Come, tell me the truth."

"No, I don't," he declared, after a slight hesitation. "He's a wrong 'un—I know that. Only, of course, there's a difference between you and me," he added in confidence.

"I'd like to know your sister," I said quite frankly. "I'll make it worth her while if she'll ask me in and let me see the house. She might do it when her mistress is out."

He shook his head dubiously.

"I don't think she'd let a stranger inside, sir."

"Well, there's no harm in trying. Will you take me and introduce me?" I asked. "Take me up there now. When do you close up?"

"In about half an hour."

"Then we'll walk down there and call," I suggested. "There's my card," and I handed him the card of a lawyer friend of mine.

Suspicion Aroused

He hesitated, but when he found another half-dollar in his palm he consented, not, however, without a good deal of curiosity as to my real object.

What he had told me regarding the Parhams, in addition to that strange scene I had witnessed from the street, aroused my interest, and I somehow felt confident that there was some connection between this man who ill-treated his wife so brutally and the unfortunate victim of the tragedy near Bayside.

I waited in a neighboring drug store until Laking came, and then we walked together down to the house.

My companion entered by the rear, and, going up to the kitchen door, rapped at it, whereupon a big buxom woman in an apron opened it, and, recognizing him, gasped:

"Oh, Harry, I'm so glad you've come! They told you about it, I suppose?"

"About what? I don't know anything," he replied, surprised at her white, scared face and the terrified look of one of the maids who stood behind her.

"Then go into the drawin' room and look! It's awful! There's a corpse in the house. Go and see for yourself."

Startled, he hurried quickly through the kitchen and along the big, well-furnished hall. I followed closely behind him, eagerly bewildered.

And what we saw was amazing.

CHAPTER XIII.

Another Mystery

IN the drawing room a startling scene presented itself.

Lying in a heap across the blue silk-covered soft couch lay the figure of the woman whom I had seen from without, seated at the piano, while beside her were the gardener and a scared female servant bending over her and trying to restore her to consciousness.

A short distance away a second female figure was lying face downwards upon the floor, and I recognized as my guide the woman in cap and apron, whom I recognised as the maid who had lowered the Venetian blinds. Around her face a long black scarf had been twisted tightly, and she by these means half-strangled.

"Oh! Mr. Laking," gasped the woman, bewildered by the subterfuge, "I'm glad you're here. There's been men in the house!"

"Men!" he cried, amazed. "What's happened to Mrs. Parham?"

"We don't know. We've sent for the doctor and the police."

"But look at Janet!" he exclaimed, crossing to her. "She'll be suffocated; and, falling on his knees he quickly untied the slip-knot by which the black scarf—a long narrow one with colored stripes at the ends—had been fastened, and then secured around the girl's face.

As we turned her over we saw that her drawn countenance was white to the lips. There were no signs of life in her, and for us could discover.

SWEDISH MEAT LOAF

TWO pounds of finely chopped meat add milk and a half pound of bread soaked in as much milk as it will absorb. Put a generous allowance of salt and three medium-sized onions, chopped fine, with a little parsley, and make a mixing thin together with two eggs, tea spoon of salt and pepper to taste. Mix thoroughly, make into loaf and roll it in flour. Put in a hot baking dripping pan with a good lump of butter; then bake fifteen minutes in hot water over it, returning to oven, basting frequently. Bake one hour and a half hours. Serve with brown gravy in which it was baked. Can be served cold.

CRANBERRY CATSUP

ONE quart of cranberries, one cup of water, two cups vinegar. Tie in a piece of muslin a few cloves, three or four allspice, about a dessertspoon of broken cinnamon and one ounce ginger. Simmer all together in a preserving kettle until the fruit is perfectly soft. Press through a colander, add one pound of brown sugar, simmer ten minutes longer and seal. This receipt can make a delicious catsup, and one conveniently made in small quantities at any time when needed.

SCORCHED NOODLES

POUR FAMILY OF FOUR.

POUR one tablespoonful milk over one unbeaten egg, add liberal pinch salt, then stir in with spoon enough sifted flour to make soft dough; knead on board until dough is firm enough to roll into a very thin sheet; leave on floured board until half dry, then roll over with flour, roll up, and then cut into very thin slices across. Shake out to dry. Have a quart of boiling water, salted to taste, put in noodles, reserving a handful. Stir gently and then boil five minutes steadily. Have frying pan very hot, put butter size of large egg in, then throw in dry noodles; brown nicely and pour over boiled noodles, which have been strained onto a hot platter. This is a very economical dish.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

WOULD HAVE BEEN WORSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The other evening I was out dining at a downtown restaurant with my fiance; as we sat at a table quietly conversing, a woman, whom she was introduced, came to our table. Instead of speaking to my fiancée she—my escort tried to calm the man (as he explained to me afterwards) who was disgusted at my escort's behavior. I must say that I thought then and there I have pummelled the intruder good and hard. I believed that he was afraid to do so, because he is a coward, and now I hate him. Would you not have me to marry such a man, even though he might be a desirable mate in most other respects?

TYPEWRITER.

THE whole thing was unpleasant, but it would have been much more so if your fiance had made a scene. What you should have done was to leave the table and then your fiance could have paid the check or asked for another table and to have the intruder removed. You should not hate him. He probably did not know exactly what to do, but the worst thing he could have done would have been to make any scene. Do not break your engagement for such a trifle.

30 Years' Experience.

FRECKLES and Moth Patches removed now stay removed all winter.

The expense is small because the operation is simple.

WARSHIP READY FOR PRESIDENT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The United States battleship Louisiana is due to leave the Brooklyn navy yard to-day for Chesapeake Bay, where on Thursday it is to take the President and Mrs. Roosevelt aboard and carry them to Panama.

Special quarters have been built and furnished on board, and typewriters and everything else needed to take care of the Presidential business have been installed. The wireless system has been put in the best of condition and will keep the President in touch with Washington all the way. The Louisiana is to coal at Hampton Roads, and will then take the President's party from the Mayflower somewhere in Chesapeake Bay.

TO VOTERS

The most important political campaign Massachusetts has ever known closes to-night.

You have heard the arguments of the candidates. Your verdict on the issue will be rendered to-morrow in the voting booth.

This newspaper urges upon every citizen of Massachusetts the importance of voting. It is your PRIVILEGE. It is your DUTY.

There is but one issue—

Shall the governing power be vested longer in moneyed plunderers?

Or shall the government of this State and of the nation be returned to THE GREAT BODY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, TO WHOM IT BELONGS?

You cannot make your protest against trust rule more effective than to vote the entire ticket of the Independence League.

Below you will find a fac-simile of a portion of the official ballot. We suggest that you take this into the booth with you and mark your ballot as indicated.

To vote for a Person, mark a Cross X in the Square at the right of the Party Name, or Political Designation. X

Little Editorials from the People

WOULD NOT PRINT E. GERRY BROWN'S SPEECHES

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Not one of the Boston newspapers except the BOSTON AMERICAN, has published E. Gerry Brown's speeches during the present campaign. I consider this one of the greatest insults that was ever handed in the face of organized labor by a capitalistic press. I fervently hope that the workingmen of this State, irrespective of party or political creed, will administer a stinging rebuke to these miserable, despicable sheets by electing E. Gerry Brown Lieutenant-Governor by a big plurality!

The Issue

All the Trusts are lined up AGAINST Moran and Brown.

All the Trusts are lined up FOR Guild and Draper.

Voter, where do YOU Stand?

Business Men and the Trusts

It is not only the poor man who fears and hates the trusts.

He feels their power in the increased prices of everything he and his family consume—food, fuel and clothing.

He knows he is robbed, and robbed by the trusts, and that the advance in wages has not anywhere near kept pace with the rising expense of living.

The legitimate business man feels toward the trusts precisely as the poor man does, but for a different reason. He may not enjoy paying monopoly prices, but he is able to pay them.

What he dreads is being despoiled of his business and independence.

He knows what has happened to the refiners and other competitors of the Standard Oil—how they have been compelled to sell out to the trust at the trust's figures or close down and get nothing.

He knows what has happened to the independent coal mine owners—how their properties have been absorbed by the Coal Trust for what the trust chose to pay for them, or go without cars to haul their product to market.

Everywhere the menace of the trust threatens the legitimate business man. Any day he may be ordered to sell for what he is offered, or quit.

So, everywhere, not only in the State of Massachusetts, but throughout the country, the independent, legitimate business man dreads the gouging, bullying trust, which, when it appears, is able to hold him up and order him to stand and deliver.

Multitudes of business men in Massachusetts who are not politicians and do not talk politics will express their feeling toward the trusts by voting against the candidate of the solidly leagued trusts, Mr. Curtis Guild, Jr.

FOR FIRST VOTERS

Election Day Is Important for You. HOW WILL YOU VOTE?

Thousands of young men will cast their first vote to-morrow.

To many of these this newspaper has talked for years past, and WE KNOW that we have earnest friends among them. We have TRIED at least to deserve their friendship.

How should the young man vote who has not voted before?

His mind is clear, he has watched with intense interest the trust developments during years past. All that has been part of his lifetime. Often, doubtless, HE HAS WISHED THAT HE COULD VOTE.

Now comes his first vote, HOW SHALL IT BE CAST?

We have no right to advise, much less to instruct. We say only this to the first voters of the State:

As an intelligent American, do you not see that the trusts and the trust newspapers are straining every effort to get your vote for Guild?

As a young man of ambition, can you not see that there would be a poor prospect for you in a country where the average citizen has no part in government?

All the opportunities of this great Republic are open to the young men IF THE PEOPLE RULE, but what are the young man's chances UNDER TRUST GOVERNMENT?

If you know, and we think you DO, that the trusts are harmful to this country, that they threaten your chances as a young man coming out in the world, we urge you to vote against those trusts.

If you believe, and we think you do, that every one of the criminal trusts and trust managers DESIRES THE ELECTION OF GUILD, THE TRUST CANDIDATE, we ask you to vote against the trust representative as you would vote against the trust manager himself.

We beg to impress upon you the sacred importance of Election Day for you. It is the beginning of your REAL manhood, the beginning of your life as a responsible citizen of the United States.

Your strongest feeling, of course, is reverence for your native land and its institutions, REVERENCE FOR THE THEORY THAT EVERY MAN WITH THE BALLOT SHOULD BE THE EQUAL OF EVERY OTHER MAN.

We beg you to vote for the candidate who represents the belief in American equality and who has against him EVERY ONE OF THE CRIMINAL TRUSTS THAT HAS SOUGHT TO MAKE OF AMERICAN EQUALITY A FARCE.
